Slice of Jerome County at stake

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls city leaders are hoping to thwart a plan by the city of Jerome to control land south of Interstate 84, but a Jerome County commissioner told them Monday it may be too late.

The city of Jerome is working on final drafts of ordinances that would extend its "area of impact," taking in a vast tract of land between I-84 and the Snake River Canyon.

Monday, the Twin Falls City Council launched its own bid for part of the land

Jerome would control.

The land between the canyon and I-84 is more closely tied to existing development in Twin Falls and is part of the city's trade area, Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney said.

The area is physically closer to Twin Falls than to Jerome and is more likely to be annexed by Twin Falls, he said. Twin Falls water and sewer systems could more easily be extended into the area, and extension from Twin Falls can occur without creating much expensive urban sprawl, he said.

The expanded area of impact proposed by the city of Jerome includes one area around the current city limits and another area — connected to the first by a narrow strip of land — surrounding the "Crossroads" intersection of I-84 and Highway 93.

Most importantly, Courtney said, the southern section of the land Jerome is eyeing lies above the Snake River Aquifer, which feeds the Twin Falls well system at Blue Lakes on the north side of the canyon, he said.

The Twin Falls City Council met Monday to discuss the potential of extending the city's land-use regulations to land north of the canyon. The city's current "impact area" ends at the middle of the Snake River.

But Jerome County Commissioner Roy Prescott attended the meeting to tell council members that the city of Jerome's expansion plan is already "on the books." City and county officials in Jerome have completed negotiations on the plan, and public hearings will begin within 60 days, he said.

Twin Falls should have entered the discussion on Jerome County's comprehensive plan much earlier, Prescott said.

Wreckage at Wendell

WILLIAM BROOK/The Times-News

Road crews clear debris from the westbound lanes of Interstate 84 Monday. The crash, about a half-mile west of I-84's easternmost Wendell exit, littered the highway with rubble and closed the westbound lanes for roughly 12 hours.

Smash-up closes interstate

WENDELL — Two semi-trucks crashed, and their fuel tanks burst into flames on Interstate 84 Monday, killing one driver, critically injuring a passenger and blocking westbound traffic for 12 hours.

Brugé Taylor, 38, of Payette, was killed when his truck smashed into the rear end of a truck that had tipped over in the highway median moments before, according to Cpl. Jim Robinson of the Idaho State Police.

The 4:50 a.m. collision split the trailer of the overturned truck, igniting the fuel tanks and engulfing both trucks in flames, the release said. Taylor died at the scene after his burning truck veered into a ditch on the north side of the interstate, the release said.

A passenger in the other truck, George Hayes, 45, of Cincinnati, was critically injured in the fire and taken to the University of Utah Burn Center in Salt Lake City, the release said.

The driver, David Counts, 23, of Lebanon, Tenn., had minor injuries. Counts was driving west when his truck veered into the highway median at milepost 156 near Wendell, then tipped over when Counts tried to correct his steering, the release said.

Police are still investigating the accident.

State police closed the interstate and rerouted traffic to the Wendell Frontage Road. The highway reopened at 5 p.m.

North Idaho woman goes parasailing on 91st birthday

The Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE — For her 90th birthday, Florabelle Dunkle memorized a 32-line poem about young spirits in old bodies and recited it before 265 friends.

That was last year. This year, Florabelle slipped on a harness and hit the sky in a parasail over Lake Coeur d'Alene.

"It was something I hadn't done," she said, giggling.

She's seen the colorful parasails from her downtown apartment for years. Her bridge buddy, Mildred, tried it at age 85 and intrigued Florabelle.

As her Aug. 25 birthday approached, she telephoned a son to tell him her plans. He wasn't surprised. As a child, Florabelle rode stacks of boards down dangerous log flumes near Cullisac. All her life, she's hunted, fished, collected mushrooms and camped.

Her son asked her to wait for a calm day. She did, but there was an encouraging crowd waiting when she tried it.

"I didn't even think about being up high," she said.

Testimony faults both Weaver, officers in Ruby Ridge clash

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Three years later, with the eagle-like vision of hindsight, the violent confrontation at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, looks like nothing so much as a tragedy that need never have happened.

For all the charges and countercharges from both sides, the evidence emerging from three weeks of Senate hearings suggests that Randy Weaver and a small army of federal agents lumbered into deadly conflict more by accident than design.

Each side was spurred on by internal pressures. Each had created overblown images of the other. And each believed — and still believes — that it was forced by the other into confrontation and the outbursts of gunfire that claimed the lives of a deputy U.S. marshal, a 14-year-old boy and his mother.

For their part, Weaver and his wife had plunged so deeply into the fogs of white separatism, anti-government conspiracy theories and religious militancy that they faced the outside world with violent rhetoric and aggressive, threatening defiance. Their isolated homestead beside Ruby Ridge in the mountains of northern Idaho bristled with guns. And Randy Weaver, holed up with his family, openly defied a federal court order to appear on weapons charges and issued bellicose warnings against agents trying to arrest him.

"It's clear that the people involved had some correct information, some hazy information, some information that was partly true and some that was outright false," Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on terrorism that conducted the hearings, told federal officials.

For example, the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms once classified Weaver among the nation's "major firearms suppliers" and listed him as having a history of criminal violations, although he had sold an undercover ATF operative two sawed-off shotguns and had no other record of illegal activity.

Testimony before the Senate and in earlier legal proceedings suggests that ATF agents had tried to

At the same time, the actions of federal law enforcement agencies and the court at several stages of the protracted affair were shaped not purely by the actions of the Weavers but by the officials' own internal pressures and attitudes.

The result was distortions and exaggerations in the federal agents' view of the situation they faced, which played a role in tipping the case toward violence.

Simpson case lawyers ready to wrap it all up

Newsway

LOS ANGELES — After a grueling eight months of testimony and legal wrangling, the lawyers in the O.J. Simpson case are gearing for closing arguments that begin today before a long-suffering jury and a worldwide audience.

"It is in summation that lawyers earn their keep," New-York University law professor Stephen Gillers said Monday.

Both sides labored through the weekend on what will be their last chance to prevail in the case. At 10 p.m. Sunday, prosecutors were still at work on the 18th floor of the courthouse trying to hammer out a compelling and cohesive narrative that points to Simpson's guilt in the murders of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman.

Gillers said Monday he believed the prosecution had lost ground during the trial and was now in a come-from-behind position.

TV finale - A3

Part of the problem, Gillers said, was with lead prosecutor Robert Shapiro, who is regarded as brilliant but not particularly well-liked by the jury because of her combative manner.

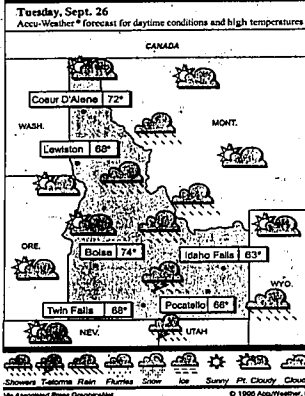

"The great lesson here for trial lawyers around the globe is that optimism and confidence are contagious," Gillers said. "And Johnnie Cochran knows how to broadcast both. He has barely faltered at all in telegraphing these qualities."

In an interview Monday, Cochran said he spent most of Friday evening talking to Simpson about his life with Nicole and discussing what the defense would tell the jury.

Cochran said he would share the closing statement with DNA expert Barry Schick, who will deal with the scientific evidence. He acknowledged that Simpson was feeling eager and anxious about the end of the trial.

Rainy Monday dampens much of nation

The Associated Press

Cloudy skies and rain were widespread Monday across much of the nation, with severe thunderstorms developing in central Florida.

As much as 2 inches of rain was forecast throughout the day from northern Texas east to Florida. Showers also fell in most of Oklahoma and western Arkansas.

Rain was in the forecast through this evening in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania received .50 inch to 1.5 inches of rain over the weekend, although officials said that was not enough to alleviate a drought emergency in effect for 32 eastern and north-central counties since last week.

The Midwest was mostly cloudy, but rain was expected to clear by Tuesday in the western Great Lakes and by Thursday toward the eastern states.

A few showers were reported along the coastal sections of the Pacific Northwest, and skies were overcast across much of the region. The gloomy weather reported from Seattle to Medford, Ore., was spreading south into California and Nevada as well.

Temperatures should begin warming up during the next several days in the central and eastern parts of the country as a mass of cold air moves out across the Atlantic Ocean.

Today's weather fact

Major progress in studying the atmosphere came in the 17th century when many key meteorological instruments were developed.

With these breakthroughs, many theories from Aristotle could be tested.

The first of these instruments was the flask, which later became the thermometer. Galileo warmed the flask with his hands, then inverted it into a reservoir of water. He would then see the water flowing up into the flask as the air cooled and contracted.

The barometer, invented by Evangelista Torricelli in 1644, was the next breakthrough. In 1646, Blaise Pascal improved it by using mercury.

Nuclear labs to keep operating

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Clinton on Monday ordered the U.S. Energy Department to continue operations at all three of the nation's major nuclear weapons labs, rejecting recommendations to phase out nuclear bomb research at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory near San Francisco.

The decision was an outgrowth of Clinton's announcement last month to support a comprehensive ban on all future nuclear testing, which prompted bomb experts to recommend against any major reduction in weapons research. Energy Department officials said.

The announcement will save more than 3,000 research jobs in the Bay Area community of Livermore, as well as appease senior Pentagon officials who have argued vehemently to preserve Livermore's role in nuclear weapons.

Clinton's decision was kept under close wraps until Monday, leaving even Livermore officials in the dark about what was coming. Livermore executive officer Ron Cochran said the lab had worked hard for 18 months to demonstrate that its expertise was still needed.

"We are very, very pleased," Cochran said.

In the aftermath of the Cold War, the nation's nuclear laboratory complex was expected to be sharply curtailed. Clinton's decision means that the system put in place after World War II will be largely kept intact.

Clinton said preserving Livermore is essential to insuring the reliability and safety of the nation's nuclear weapons stockpile, the size of which is classified but widely estimated at roughly 6,000 bombs.

Weapons experts have warned that a permanent end to underground nuclear testing would create serious doubts about the reliability of bombs as they age. Maintaining a high level of confidence in the bombs will require a massive research program, with competing teams conducting peer review of each other's work, they said.

As a result, the Energy Department is planning to spend $40 billion over the next decade on the effort, building several high-energy experimental machines and establishing new production lines at the labs to make spare parts for bombs.

"This is the price we pay to forswear nuclear testing," said Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary.

Twin Falls officials said they were not informed of events in the county to the north or invited to participate. Courtney said a Times-News article last week was the first he had heard of Jerome's proposal.

"We'll make that invitation now," Prescott said. "We'd be more than happy to get with you."

The Twin Falls council agreed to draft a letter to Jerome County this week, outlining the area Twin Falls would like to include in its own area of impact.

But taking land all the way to the canyon is a good thing for both Jerome city and the county, Prescott said.

The newly formed Jerome water and sewer district at the Crossroads intersection has its own wells and will likely be able to send extra water into the city of Jerome, which has had problems with inadequate water volume and pressure, Prescott said.

Jerome County commissioners like the idea because the city is better equipped to deal with commercial and residential development around the Crossroads than is encroaching on agricultural land, he said. One major subdivision is already platted at the southwest corner of the Crossroads, and several others are anticipated, closer to the canyon rim, he said.

"County commissioners" admit freely we aren't in the business of urbanization," Prescott said. Jerome officials want to take care of the county's problems before they happen, and they don't want another Blue Lakes Boulevard, he told the Twin Falls council.

"I feel that you're being driven by developers," Councilman Lance Clow told Prescott.

The area north of the canyon needs to be cultivated as the major engine to Twin Falls, he said.

Jerome commissioners also think Twin Falls hasn't done a good job of preserving canyon rim land, but Jerome has had a preservation area in place along the rim for the past 15 years, Prescott said.

The Twin Falls council does have a large interest in the north side of the Snake River Canyon, Clow said. "That's what we look at," he said.

And Jerome has a better record of preserving rim land only because it hasn't been "flooded with developers" or had to deal with development that started 50 or 60 years ago, Clow said.

Correction

The Associated Press on Sept. 22 erroneously reported a comment state schools Superintendent Anne Fox made during state Board of Education debate on the salary for the University of Idaho's next president.

The quote should have read: "We need to be sure the alumni association nor anybody else is going to dump a bunch of money in as part of the compensation package."

Perot launches 3rd party

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a turnaround that could dramatically reshape the 1996 elections, Ross Perot vowed Monday night to establish a new, reform-minded political party that would nominate a presidential candidate and try to swing congressional races.

Perot said he had no intention to run as the new party's standard bearer. "This is not about me running for president," he said. "The last thing I want is for this thing to be about me." But he did not flatly rule it out.

As recently as six weeks ago, Perot said he had no interest in launching a third party. But, in a stunning change of heart, he said his United We Stand America political organization would spearhead efforts to launch a new party in California, Maine and Ohio — all of which have 1995 deadlines to qualify a new party for the 1996 ballot.

"We are going to start the process of creating a political party for the independent voters," Perot said. "It will not be owned by the special interests."

Perot left open the possibility the effort could stop at the end of the year — if polls now showing 60 percent of Americans open to the idea of a third party suddenly shift and indicate a growing satisfaction with Democrats or Republicans.

Perot

He said the new venture would be named the Independence Party, or the Reform Party in states that either have an independent party or do not allow use of that name.

Once the new party qualifies for open its presidential nominating process to anyone who could get petitions signed by 10 percent of the new party's members.

"We want world-class people," he said on CNN's "Larry King Live." "Some weirdo is not going to get 10 percent of our votes."

The organization then would choose a presidential nominee through a nationwide convention process. He said it was possible, but highly unlikely, that the party could decide to back one of the major party presidential candidates.

He said the new party would not field congressional candidates, or at least not on any widespread basis, but would endorse candidates from the major parties and offer them its slate on state ballots.

Perot said the new party's agenda would mirror that of his United We Stand group.

turn Weaver into an informant against other militants. — and cracked down hard when he refused to cooperate.

"It seems to me you were really looking at Mr. Weaver as an informant rather than a major suspect of the ATF," subcommittee chairman Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., told ATF officials who testified about the case.

The ATF undercover operative who bought illegal shotguns from Weaver acknowledged to senators that he had failed to tape-record what had been alleged to be Weaver's most incriminating statements and thus had no corroboration.

Moreover, when Weaver failed to appear for a 1991 court hearing on the weapons charge and then publicly vowed not to be taken, the U.S. Marshals Service assigned his case a level of attention and resources far higher than it usually assigns to offenses such as those with which Weaver was charged.

Again, the reasons seemed only partly related to Weaver's actions. The ATF, according to Senate testimony, told the Marshals Service that Weaver was not only involved with illegal guns but was suspected in a series of Montana bank robberies — an assertion not based on fact.

Questioned about this error by members of the subcommittee, the director of the ATF called it "inexcusable."

"A person should not be listed as a suspect unless (he) actually (is) a suspect," ATF Director John W. Magaw said firmly.

But Weaver, now 47, also bears heavy responsibility for the tragedy visited on his family and that of Deputy Marshal William Degan, a decorated officer who was fatally wounded in an initial confrontation near the Weaver cabin.

Weaver, the subcommittee's first witness earlier this month, acknowledged that "I am not without fault in this matter."

He went on to say that, "if I had it to do over again, knowing what I know now ... I would come down from the mountain for the court appearance."

Weaver and a friend, Kevin Harris, were cleared of murder charges in 1993 resulting from Degan's death and Weaver was acquitted of firearms charges. A jury convicted him only of refusing to surrender for trial at the earlier date.

It was Weaver's hostility toward authorities that set the stage for the ill-fated confrontation.

Networks brace for Simpson trial end

Clinton savors foreign success: Will it help?

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Constantly criticized on foreign policy, President Clinton is savoring a rare moment of success as American diplomats broker Bosnian peace talks and the White House prepares for another Middle East signing ceremony.

It's welcome news for an administration battered by the Republican revolution on Capitol Hill. But, sadly for Clinton, foreign-policy achievements usually play better in the history books than in the voting booth.

Ask George Bush, the political hero of Desert Storm, or Jimmy Carter, the architect of the first major peace agreement in the Middle East.

"Clinton will find that his foreign-policy record and 60 cents will get him a cup of coffee and two votes," said University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato.

"Except in times of war, Americans don't care a lot about foreign policy," Sabato said. "The only time they vote on foreign policy is when there is a direct domestic interest."

Foreign policy has never been Clinton's strong suit.

For most of his presidency, his approval rating in that area has been under 40 percent. Yet, there were never great expectations on that score. After all, Clinton was elected to fix health care and other domestic problems, replacing a president who, many Americans felt, spent too much time looking overseas.

Clinton will be able to showcase his foreign policy skills Thursday when PLO chief, Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin come to the White House to sign an agreement ending Israeli occupation of West Bank cities. It will be a high-profile followup to the historic handshake of peace between Arafat and Rabin on the White House lawn in 1993.

Aggressive U.S. diplomacy, backed by NATO air strikes, also helped bring about Bosnian peace negotiations in New York. While nothing is predictable in the Balkans, the administration says the talks present "the most promising opportunity to date for peace."

Despite recent successes, Clinton's record remains under attack.

"U.S. foreign policy under this administration has been marked by a lack of assertiveness, a lack of credibility and a lack of resolve — in sum, a lack of leadership," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, who is seeking the Republican presidential nomination, said last week.

Not surprisingly, Clinton has a different perspective.

"What's happening in Bosnia demonstrates once again the importance of American leadership around the world at the end of the Cold War," the president asserted in his weekly radio address.

Clinton spoke of "extraordinary achievements" in the past year: "Democracy restored to Haiti. Greater peace in the Middle East and in Northern Ireland. Russian nuclear weapons no longer aimed at our people. The indefinite extension of a nuclear nonproliferation treaty. Real progress toward a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty. North Korea's agreement to end its nuclear weapons program."

Some of that sounds like wishful thinking.

"Most Republicans thought this would be a more vulnerable issue for Clinton than they now feel it is," said Johns Hopkins University political scientist Frederick Holborn. "He's certainly better off than he was."

NEW YORK (AP) — Closing arguments in O.J. Simpson's murder trial pose no problem for cable networks already providing virtual gavel-to-gavel coverage. Broadcast networks, however, are girding for some of their trickiest coverage.

ABC, CBS and NBC plan to air live coverage at the start of legal summations with the prosecution slated to begin its wrapup about 10 a.m. MDT today, but that's about as far ahead as they want to plan.

Cable's E! Entertainment, CNBC, CNN and Court TV plan continuous coverage of the extended court day, which opens at 10 a.m. MDT and closes at 9 p.m. MDT. Once the jury withdraws to deliberate, they'll revert to regular scheduling until the verdict is in.

The broadcast networks seem to be leaning against disrupting their new prime-time schedule. ABC can cover court action through "Nightline," "PrimeTime Live" and a Thursday night Peter Jennings special; NBC has multiple editions of "Dateline NBC," and CBS has "48 Hours."

Still, genuine conflict exists between rivaling live coverage and the ratings of new fall shows.

"It's going to be a real-time, seat-of-your-pants decision," said Lane Venardos, CBS vice president for hard news and special events.

"Because our affiliates are rightly asking, we've told them how it begins, how it will work, and how they can integrate local stuff into ours, but we haven't told them how it ends, because we don't know," he said.

What drives the networks' decisions is straightforward, he said.

"How compelling is this going to be? This could be the most interesting part of the trial. Or not," he said. "Still, you'd make a big mistake betting against the O.J. Simpson trial being interesting."

ABC's executive producer for special events, Terry O'Neill, and NBC's executive producer of news specials, David Bohman, reached the same conclusions in their planning.

"We're going to go on the air Tuesday at the top with full coverage, then assess it the way we do any news story," O'Neill said. "If it doesn't, we'll stay with it. If it does, we'll go back to regular programming, with the possibility of interrupts and updates to keep people informed."

CBS has a new wrinkle on line for closing arguments: Almost 1,000 video clips have been transferred to laser disk for instant retrieval to illustrate the lawyers' references to evidence and testimony.

Looming behind closing arguments, of course, is the unpredictable news nature of the jury's deliberations. When jurors reach a verdict, no one expects more than an hour's notice.

That pretty much ensures that the network anchors, ABC's Peter Jennings, CBS' Dan Rather and NBC's Tom Brokaw, will chair the story from New York City, the networks will be on permanent standby, with "hot" control rooms, satellite links, rented fiberoptic lines, engineers and reporters ready to go on-air at a moment's notice.

"There are a limited number of satellites in the sky and fiber paths that exist," said Bohman, who counted "well over 100 video pathways" out of Los Angeles for the news organizations covering the trial.

"All the networks have had to go ahead and order those up and turn those on," he said. "There would never be enough time to start from scratch."

It's an expensive wait, but no network would estimate the cost of deliberations.

"(NBC News President) Andy Lack clearly said it's going to be an important news coverage event for demonstrating how the TV news divisions work," Bohman said. "We intend to be aggressive and better than anyone else."

Fed expected to stand still on interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's bullish view of economic prospects has convinced most analysts that the Fed will not cut interest rates when its policy-makers meet this week.

And some economists are beginning to forecast that the central bank is finished reducing rate altogether, which would be disappointing news to the millions of American consumers and businesses whose borrowing costs are linked to Fed interest rates.

The central bank's chief policy-making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, will meet behind closed doors Tuesday to decide on its next moves.

Analysts agree the committee will not cut rates this week, especially after Greenspan's optimistic review of current conditions, delivered last Friday to the Senate Banking Committee.

Greenspan declared that "near-term prospects for the U.S. economy have improved" following a near-stall last spring. He noted that unemployment has edged down, housing sales have rebounded and even the troubled manufacturing sector recorded a sizable jump in production in August.

That view was bolstered further on Monday with a report that sales of existing homes jumped 3 percent in August to a 15-month high.

"The soft landing is here and the Fed is pretty happy with the way things are right now," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis. "They see no need to lower interest rates."

But analysts are split on what the committee will do at its last two meetings of the year, on Nov. 15 and Dec. 19. While some economists said they were still looking for rate cuts later in the year, others said they believed the central bank had accomplished its goals with the single rate reduction and will not push rates down further.

At their July 6 meeting, the Fed cut the federal funds rate for the first time in nearly three years, reducing the target rate for the interest that banks charge each other for overnight loans from 6 percent down to 5.75 percent.

Banks' prime lending rate, the benchmark rate for millions of consumer and business loans, declined by a quarter-point as well to 8.75 percent. Since it has been moving in lockstep with the funds rate, no further rate cuts would mean no further short-term rate relief.

Analysts noted that this time a year ago, the central bank was in the midst of a string of seven rate increases designed to slow a booming economy before inflation got out of hand.

CWA members approve strike

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — By a 9-1 margin, the Communications Workers of America announced Monday its members employed by US West Direct have authorized a strike against the telephone directory company.

The CWA's District 7, headed by Vice President Sue Pisha, represents about 1,400 US West Direct employees in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah and Washington.

According to Pisha, strike action may become necessary if a satisfactory agreement is not reached when the existing contract expires at midnight, Oct. 14. Bargaining between the union and the company started on Aug. 21.

Pisha said there are "many, many issues that still must be resolved in these negotiations, including downsizing, wages and sales competition."

given for ulcer, T cell research

NEW YORK (AP) — A scientist who discovered that bacteria cause ulcers — an idea that met with widespread skepticism but eventually changed ulcer treatment — has won a prestigious, $25,000 research award. The work by Dr. Barry J. Marshall of the University of Virginia Medical Center in Charlottesville opened the door to treating peptic ulcer disease effectively with antibiotics. Marshall won the Albert Lasker Clinical Research Award, one of three Lasker awards to be presented Friday in New York. Marshall's idea that a bacterium causes ulcers, announced in 1983, challenged half a century of belief that ulcers were caused by stress and too much stomach acid. He experimented upon himself by swallowing a sample of the bacterium and getting a stomach biopsy. The Lasker award for basic medical research will be shared by five scientists, who will receive $10,000 each. Their work, taken together, showed how T cells of the body's disease-fighting immune system recognize invading organisms so that the immune system can be activated.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first of this year's Christmas stamps will go on sale Saturday at the North Pole — North Pole, N.Y., that is. The set of four stamps, featuring Victorian-style images of Santa Claus, are based on pictures popular a century ago. Postmaster General Marvin Runyon hailed Santa as "that dapper fellow with the white hair and the smile who always makes his deliveries on time — the ultimate inspiration for postal employees." North Pole, N.Y., site of the first-day ceremonies for the stamps, is a substation of the Lake Placid post office. Every year the office postmarks thousands of pieces of holiday mail.

AIDS activist Mary Fisher stands next to a coffin in Washington Monday, part of an AIDS exhibit that was to be displayed on Capitol Hill.

Artist-activist finds home for coffin, AIDS exhibit

WASHINGTON (AP) — An elaborate gilded coffin, the centerpiece of an art exhibit with an AIDS theme, went on display Monday at a union headquarters after senators decided it was too graphic for their office building. "I'm not sure what they're afraid of," said artist Mary Fisher, who held the 1992 Republican convention spellbound with a speech about being a mother with the AIDS virus. "I didn't consider my art controversial, nor do I consider myself a controversial person." Three senators had invited Fisher to mount her 26-piece exhibit, called "Messages," in the rotunda of the Russell Senate Office Building on Capitol Hill. But subsequent objections to the coffin, and Fisher's refusal to remove it from the show, led Sen. John Warner, R-Va., to rescind the invitation Friday. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., one of the three original sponsors, helped Fisher find space at the foot of the Capitol at the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America headquarters. Fisher's collages and sculpture are exhibited in a fifth-floor room draped with white sheets and crawling with media attracted by the furor. "A capital conundrum over AIDS, art and appropriateness!" declared a fired-up TV reporter doing a stand-up next to the notorious casket. Fisher, 47, contracted the AIDS virus from her husband, who died in 1993. She wandered among her artwork Monday, a small blonde woman in black, a red commemorative AIDS ribbon pinned to her shoulder. Many of her pieces are collage panels featuring headlines about AIDS, excerpts from her speeches, and photographs of her two sons, aged 7 and 5. Some of her sculptures are wooden pulpits covered with words, paintings and photographs.

State must steer carefully in improving the roads

An Idaho liberal, according to the old joke, is someone who wants to spend money on fixing the roads.

By that standard, liberalism seems to be gaining ground. An Idaho Transportation Department hearing in Burley last week indicated that local folk are willing to pay higher taxes for better highways.

Fair enough. Idaho highways are in notoriously poor repair. The state says its backlog of road and bridge improvements has topped $4 billion. The time appears to have come for the Legislature to scrape up some extra cash.

But how to raise that cash and how to spend it remain important questions. Citizens who testified in Burley last week cautioned the state not to sock property taxpayers for highway money. They're right. Highways are one of those government services whose costs should be linked to use. In other words, the people who drive on roads should pay for them.

The easiest way to do that is through gasoline taxes. Taxing fuel puts highway costs squarely on users. It also spreads the load fairly among the state's regions. While the Boise area will need the lion's share of highway spending, it also will generate the lion's share of revenue.

Auto registration fees are another method that links cost to use. Idaho's, which are relatively low, could be raised without undue pain.

A third possibility is to put higher taxes and fees on trucks, whose size and weight are hard on roads. The trucking lobby has been marvelously effective at telling lawmakers and the public that trucks already pay their fair share, but the state would benefit from an independent analysis of that question.

Regardless of how the money is raised, the state should take pains to spend it frugally. Highway budgets usually contain some excess, and Idaho's administrative costs are relatively high. Also, the recent expansion of the three-person Transportation Board to seven members may encourage regional deal-making. ("I'll vote for your area's bridge if you'll back my pet highway.")

Legislators and the Transportation Board need to monitor costs closely. And the board should make sure its priorities are based on genuine need, rather than regional politics.

With highway money as tight as it is, let's make sure every precious dollar is used prudently.

Nation should balk at GOP's talk

House Speaker Newt Gingrich's tongue is getting to be as far from the woodwork as the other day, Gingrich blamed the shooting of Stephanie Kuhn, the 3-year-old child shot by Los Angeles gang members, on the New Deal. The first suspect arrested in the case was out on parole, which Gingrich declared was a glaring symbol of the New Deal. The speaker is theoretically a historian.

Gingrich's tongue went further and rattled financial markets last week, causing one TV commentator to announce in tones of hushed horror, "Now he has affected the bond market." The dollar lost 5 percent against major currencies, sending interest rates up sharply. The day Gingrich declared that he would send the United States into default if President Clinton does not agree to the Republican budget, if Congress does not raise the debt ceiling this fall, the government will not be able to pay for Social Security, military pay, or interest on the national debt.

Apocalyptic Republican rhetoric is as common as dirt on the Hill, but it made the bond markets nervous. He who unnerves the bond markets unnerves many Republicans.

Republican rhetoric now so dominates the political debate that the $270 billion cut in Medicare is described as an increase, and raising taxes on the working poor is cutting the earned income tax credit. Raising taxes is simply indefensible, given that the Republicans also plan to cut taxes for the richest Americans.

Molly Ivins

Meanwhile, under the curious euphemism "free enterprise," the Republican juggernaut in the House continues to expand cowboy socialism, opening up vast stretches of public lands for exploitation by logging, mining and ranching companies. None of them pays anything close to market prices for the right to destroy the land. Perhaps the House could do for corporate welfare what it has just done to welfare for poor children and put a two-year limit on it.

In a 61-38 vote, the Senate upheld a provision that keeps the U.S. Department of Agriculture from preventing frozen chicken from being labeled "fresh." Hey, fresh, frozen, cut, increase - it's all the same to Republicans.

The Senate also voted to keep another chunk of corporate welfare: the market promotion program that uses tax dollars to help U.S. companies - now enjoying their highest profit levels in 45 years - to advertise overseas.

The Senate voted to lift a moratorium on patent mining that allows companies to take title to public land for as little as $2.50 an acre.

House members are moving to repeat the depletion of the ozone layer; they want to postpone the phasing out of chemicals that scientists say are destroying the protective layer of the planet. Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, one of those lunatic California Republicans, said that the theory of global warming is unproven and at worst is liberal claptrap.

It is unclear how the paranoid right managed to conclude that liberals have some vested interest in ozone depletion. Bleeding-heart liberals actually worry about children; we really don't have a dog in this fight. It's the scientists who are upset about the hole in the ozone layer, which is now twice the size it was last year.

Some of this apparently stems from the vast scientific learning of radio host Rush Limbaugh, who has declared that if the polar ice caps melt, the seas won't rise because if ice melts in a glass, it doesn't increase the total volume of water in the glass.

This would be true if the polar ice caps were just giant icebergs. Unfortunately, the Antarctic ones are on land. Melting the polar ice caps has the effect of adding more water to the glass.

On April 4, Limbaugh declared: "For the longest time, I have been using innate intelligence guided by experience and my finely honed instincts to rebut and refute the silly notion that we are victims of global warming."

Why the Republican Party chooses to get its scientific advice from Limbaugh rather than the World Meteorological Organization is also unclear.

Add dairy to farm freedom act

A very important issue comes up for vote this Wednesday. The vote will be in the U.S. Senate and the importance will have a direct impact on our local economy.

The issue is the Freedom to Farm Act, and the importance is to add the dairy industry. Adding dairy will help ensure this rapidly growing dairy products/cheese industry.

Idaho is now producing 4.8 percent of the nation's cheese; 90 percent of all the milk produced in Idaho goes to the production of cheese. Over the past five years, cheese production in Idaho has grown 15 percent each year, making it one of Idaho's fastest growing industries in the state.

The industry is particularly big in our Magic Valley area. A vote against adding dairy is a negative vote for this area. Monetary losses could ripple out to the dairymen, agribusinesses, cheese producers and the local economy.

This new Congress was elected to reform government. This is what last November's election was all about. Ask Sen. Larry Craig, who sits on the Senate Agriculture Committee, to make a vote for cheese, which is also a vote for the dairy industry. Vote to add dairy to the Freedom to Farm Act.

Boaters must learn the ropes

As a concerned boater, I can remain silent no longer. We need to educate ourselves. Imagine driving a car without any education. Would you be safe? Reasonable and prudent? Until mandatory safety courses are enforced, we boaters have to take it upon ourselves.

No age limit to drive a car? Come on, parents, would you turn your 8-year-old loose on Blue Lakes? On a motorcycle? Yet let him ride a Jet Ski in front of a 3,500 pound ski boat pulling a skier at 36 miles per hour. Does he know the ski boat has the right of way? Is his concentration too focused on the operation of a machine capable of 50 mph to even notice the boat? Boaters would you drive down Blue Lakes with a beer in hand looking back more often than forward?

Obviously, many boat and personal watercraft operators believe there are no laws once you are on the water. Read your Boaters Safety Guide, people! You remember, the one you threw away then you registered your watercraft. News flash, boaters! There are laws. News flash, personal watercraft operators! You follow the exact same laws! (The U.S. Coast Guard reports boating safety has steadily improved since 1971, but personal watercraft accidents have doubled since 1991. Currently, personal watercrafts account for one-third of all watercraft accidents.)

Well, OK. We do allow anyone, regardless of age, without any training of any kind to operate a watercraft. But if we don't educate ourselves and use proper judgment, we won't be skiing much longer. With the increase in popularity, safety is a must to prevent no-wake zones and personal watercraft/water-skiing restrictions. We must adhere to the rules we do have. If you don't have a Boaters Safety Guide, please get one. Better yet, attend one of the many free boaters safety courses offered. (Publications such as Water-Ski Magazine also offer invaluable articles on safety and courtesy.) Then my family will be safer, as well as yours. And once we get the rules down, maybe we can talk about courtesy.

Craig must cast vote correctly

As one who spent his formative years in Jerome, I have watched this area grow. The most rapid growing industry seems to be the cheese production industry.

I remember the days of old with the Challenge Creamery in Jerome as the grandfather of this fledgling cheese industry. Lots of farmers did well selling their milk to the creamery. I have enjoyed watching the immense growth of the cheese industry, pioneered in the Magic Valley and now spreading throughout southern Idaho.

To keep this market available to the local economy, there needs to be some changes. The Congress needs to pass legislation that changes the old regulation on dairy pricing. Congress needs to vote to add dairy to the Farm Bill. These votes are vital to the local economies of southern Idaho.

I understand that Rep. Clump and Chenoweth have agreed to vote to add dairy to the Farm Bill. Sen. Larry Craig has the opportunity to vote for this addition this Wednesday. I hope he votes for Idaho's local economies and adds dairy to the Farm Bill.

Trim dairies from budget fat

I am a lifelong farmer and resident of the Lincoln County area. I have also been the Lincoln County Republican Party chairman for a couple of decades.

Idaho and the United States elected some true reformers in this last election. These representatives and senators are really hitting hard to reduce the deficit and get government back on track.

One area they are targeting to try to reduce the deficit is getting the government out of the agriculture industry, specifically dairy. Some of my dairy friends say that the government has "ruined the dairy industry" and they are glad to see the price supports go. Other dairymen may be grumbling but know the subsidies are gradually going to end and are getting reconciled to it.

The interesting fact about Idaho's milk production is that 85 percent to 90 percent of all of Idaho's milk goes to the cheese production facilities. That provides a big market for our milk sales - an important one to keep sound, especially for the sake of our dairymen.

Our senior senator, Larry Craig, of whom I am a strong supporter, has a chance to vote on this in his Agriculture Committee. He needs to vote to get the government out of the agriculture business by supporting the Freedom to Farm Act and adding dairy. We elected these folks to reform government... now let's get to work and cut that budget!

Give the market a real home

Wouldn't it be great if we had a permanent home for the Farmer's Market on the old site of the Twin Falls Feed and Ice Co? A facility could be built there that could have space for many stalls where individuals could sell produce, food, crafts and other goods and where the public could go year around to shop, eat and enjoy local and professional entertainment, bazaars, swap meets, small conventions and trade shows in an informal way. The facility could be used by everyone, including youth groups, church groups and senior citizens.

Twin Falls is a regional hub for shopping, and this would be another drawing card for getting people to come here. It would be just across the street from the envisioned little theater (in the old flour mill grain tank) and close to downtown.

It could be constructed so that it would be closed in during the winter and open to nature in the other seasons. It could have fountains, landscaping, picnic tables, and it would be fun for all.

Why don't some of our more affluent citizens get behind something like this and promote it? Many of the less affluent people would follow suit and donate what they could to make it work.

In the past, the main push has been to fund College of Southern Idaho facilities and programs. While that is very admirable, much of the local population does not get or want to take advantage of those facilities.

This facility would be for everyone, and no one would feel excluded from using it.

Robertson takes over the GOP

Country-club Republicans, beware! Country-club Republicans are not invited to participate in the primary elections next year. The Christian Coalition just completed its annual conference in Washington, D.C., and made it clear that their membership was to control next year's election. The Rev. Pat Robertson appeared in person and not through his hister, Ralph Reed. The reverend claimed that the coalition now controls at least 50 percent of the Republican Party committees, and that its goal was to have 100 percent control of the National Republican Party by the 1996 elections.

Ralph Reed repeated on several occasions that the membership of the coalition was Roman Catholic and Evangelical Christian; Evangelical Christians only - not the established mainline Protestants. On other occasions, the old-fashioned party support is blasphemed as Country-club Republicanism.

Then a spell-binding preacher named Peter Marshall, to great cheers and huzzas, told the world that God created the Republican Party in the 1850s to be responsible for the morals of the United States, and it still had that obligation. That public morality is obvious that the Rev. Pat Robertson's interpretation of morality, which may not be totally acceptable to the rest of the Christian community - Republican or Democrat.

This immoral Democrat remains concerned about the Christian Coalition's moral standards as set out in its family contract. The No. 2 item in priority is a tax program. The contract goes well beyond supporting the traditional family as the bastion of our society. Unlike the morals of old, the Rev. Robinson certainly has never considered vows of poverty. He remains and has increased a $20 million-plus fortune that he inherited. The Evangelical Christian tax program is designed to keep the rich richer.

Again, this poor ol' Democrat remains concerned that the Rev. Pat Robertson is bragging about controlling the Republican Party for his Christian group for the purpose of promoting his personal program, most of which has nothing to do with the poor family man who is working for minimum wage, and God created the Republican party just for Pat - pretty heavy stuff.

Time runs out on Washington, Oregon for guides' rights laws

LEWISTON (AP) — Time has run out on Oregon and Washington lawmakers to pass legislation giving their licensed outfitters reciprocal rights on the Snake River under a two-year-old Idaho law.

Dean Sangrey, executive director of the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Licensing Board, said the Oregon Legislature came close to passing a bill, but the Washington Legislature accomplished nothing before the Idaho law expired in July.

The Idaho Legislature passed the law to peacefully close a rift between Idaho and Washington outfitters and guides on the Snake River.

Idaho Outfitters and Guides triggered the dispute by citing three Washington outfitters on the Idaho side of the Snake River four years ago. But it has not actively pursued the rift since then as it sought reciprocity pacts with the other state.

"Anyone who is operating on the Idaho side needs to have an outfitter or guide license in the state of Idaho, and we will enforce that," Sangrey said Friday. "The law requires us to do that."

He said no outfitters have been cited on the Idaho side of the Snake River for failing to have their $250 Idaho license since July. But he said outfitters blatantly operating out of Hells Gate State Park near Lewiston or aggressively advertising inside the state without the proper license could be cited.

"In all honesty, I think we will continue to try to resurrect an agreement and I have received indications from people in Washington that they are interested in doing so likewise," Sangrey said.

Washington state Sen. Eugene Prince, R-Thornton, said Washington has never prohibited Idaho guides from going past the center of the Snake River.

"We don't have restrictions on them," he said. "So how do you do something if we don't have any restrictions on them?"

The Idaho law required Washington and Oregon to pay bills and establish minimum guide licensing requirements for first-aid training and liability insurance coverage. It also included limits on the number of licenses issued to minimize the impact on fisheries by commercial outfitters and guides.

"Idaho is a monopoly and Washington doesn't want to get into the monopoly business," Prince said. "I think they have more to lose than Washington does. If they get nasty about it, we'll have to change the law."

Sangrey said he does not expect to push the Idaho Legislature to pass another bill to give Washington and Oregon more time. He said he needs to resurrect the idea with both states first.

Forester upholds permits for camps

The Associated Press

Intermountain Region Deputy Forester Jack Blackwell has rejected appeals and affirmed a June decision to issue permits for three private outfitter camps in central Idaho's Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness.

Salmon and Challis National Forest Supervisor George Matzko decided on June 6 to allow continued operation of three private outfitter camps along the Salmon Wild and Scenic River. His ruling was based on an environmental impact statement on the camps at Stub Creek, Smith Gulch and Arctic Creek.

The camps operated before the area was designated wilderness and before it was made part of the Wild and Scenic River system. Special-use permits for the camps were scheduled to expire at the end of this year, but Matzko's decision granted them new 15-year permits.

Wilderness Watch, The Wilderness Resource Center and The Ecology Center and an individual appeal his ruling. They claimed allowing private camps in wilderness is inconsistent with the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, the Central Idaho Wilderness Act that created the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness, and the Wild Salmon River management plan.

The appeals argued that the camps should be phased out because Congress set specific directions for managing the Salmon River as a wild, essentially primitive roadless corridor.

But in a statement issued last week from the Intermountain Region office in Ogden, Utah, Blackwell said that while the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act aims to maintain primitive conditions, "the legislative record accompanying the Central Idaho Wilderness Act recognized the traditional and existing uses," such as jet boats and outfitting camps.

Lance recovers another $50,000 from telemarketer

BOISE (AP) — After two years of legal battles, the attorney general's office has recovered an additional $50,000 from a defunct Las Vegas telemarketer for consumer protection law violations.

Attorney General Alan Lance said the money will be used to pay restitution to scores of Idaho residents victimized by the company.

Lance said a prior court judgment ordered the company, Professional Marketing, to make refunds to Idaho residents. He said the company made $38,000 in refunds, but dozens of customers didn't get a refund, or were told by the company that they had to meet nonexistent conditions or were offered far less than they had coming.

"After it became apparent that Professional Marketing had not complied with its restitution obligations, my Consumer Protection Unit pursued the company both in Idaho and Nevada courts. I am pleased that we were able to recover the additional $50,000," Lance said.

June Rinck, Sandpoint, said she has been waiting to get a refund from Professional Marketing. "The amount certainly is appreciated," she said. "I hope those unlawful telemarketers will some day understand the harm they have caused many people."

Lance says his Consumer Protection Unit figures the amount recovered still is $70,000 short of what Idaho residents should have coming, but those who qualify will get proportionate refunds.

"We will continue to search for other assets to seize, and if successful, pass those to consumers. Because Professional Marketing has gone out of business... we are not optimistic about locating additional assets," the attorney general said.

Private eye to aid Kootenai defender

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Kootenai County public defender's office has hired a private detective to help in a case involving a Coeur d'Alene contractor facing fraud charges.

Ron Stratton, 43, faces eight felony counts for allegedly defrauding area residents out of thousands of dollars by accepting payment for construction projects and never completing the work.

Now private investigator Ted Pulver of Post Falls has been hired by the public defender's office to help in Stratton's defense.

Wildlife Waystation takes lions, ligers to Golden State

LAVA HOT SPRINGS (AP) — Twenty-seven African lions and crossbred "ligers" rescued from the aqualid Ligertown Game Farm were on their way to a Southern California wildlife park Monday.

Employees of Wildlife Waystation spent the weekend tranquilizing and caging the exotic cats, including five lion cubs, for their trip to the park in the Angeles National Forest.

"This is like a miracle," Bannock County Sheriff Bill Lynn said after Martine Colette and her group arrived Saturday "with trucks, cages, veterinarians and all the paperwork necessary for the cats to be taken to her refuge."

Colette started Wildlife Waystation in 1969. The non-profit organization financed by donations rescues exotic animals of all types and situations — from unwanted laboratory animals to creatures people have purchased as pets and decided they could not handle.

It responded after hearing about conditions at Ligertown, where 18 full-grown lions were killed after more than a dozen escaped Wednesday night from the ramshackle compound near Lava Hot Springs. Besides the escaped cats, some of the lions were killed within the enclosure when they became aggressive toward people who responded to the situation.

Sheriff's deputies continued to Ligertown operators Robert Fieber and Dotti Martin from their home at the site Monday until all the animals were removed. With the cats gone, about 50 wolf hybrids were being caught, marked with paint, photographed and caged for the temporary move to an animal care facility near Roberts until permanent homes can be found.

Colette's arrival was a relief for local officials trying to find suitable housing for the big cats.

'The deputies here didn't kill those lions; the people that kept them here did that.'

— Martine Colette, founder and head of Wildlife Waystation

Her crew, with the help of Bob Gibbons, a U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian, drew blood from each tranquilized animal as deputies painted a letter on the cat, photographed it and logged its vital information.

The cats will be quarantined at Wildlife Waystation until their health is determined.

Colette described conditions at Ligertown as very unhealthy. "This is unconscionable," she said. "This is one of the worst situations I have ever seen. How these people could put these animals in such a horrible environment and in such danger, I don't know. The deputies here didn't kill those lions; the people that kept them here did that."

She and her assistants scalded chicken wire walls and pallet walkways during the weekend as deputies guided them through the maze of dark cages piled high with bones, feathers and feces.

Colette praised sheriff's deputies for their handling of the situation.

"It causes me physical pain that some of these beautiful animals had to die," she said. "But, it is their job to protect people and they did that with as much consideration for the animals as possible."

Among the lions taken to California was a large male with a badly swollen and infected paw and a pregnant female due to deliver soon. Colette said many of the animals need dental work.

"Sometimes I am amazed that animals can survive in such appalling situations," she said. "I don't know how they made it. I'm glad we can help them now."

Undersheriff Lorin Nielsen said county officials plan to lobby the Legislature next year to write a law dealing with the care of exotic animals. Such efforts in the past have been unsuccessful.

"You can just bet all of us who have been involved with this will be right up in front of the Legislature as soon as it starts to make sure that nothing like this can ever happen again," Nielsen said.

Ex-detention home staffer charged for having sex with teen

SANDPOINT (AP) — A 39-year-old woman who worked at the Bonner County juvenile detention home has been arrested on charges of having sex with a former-teen-age inmate.

Carolyn Black of Sandpoint was charged with two counts of sexual battery of a minor on Friday. She is suspected of twice having sex with a 16-year-old boy.

Sheriff Chip Roos said neither alleged incident occurred at the detention center, where the boy spent time on burglary charges before his Aug. 2 release.

Black worked at the facility for almost two years before being charged on Friday. She was released without bail but faces up to life in prison if convicted of sexual battery.

"We feel that we've got a perfect record of always doing the right thing,"

Roos said. "It hurts to arrest your own. But no one is above the law."

The sheriff said Black and the youth allegedly had their first sexual encounter on Aug. 18 and the second on Sept. 1. One of the incidents allegedly took place at Black's Sandpoint home, and other took place 20 miles from the center, Bonner County Undersheriff Nick Kragert said.

High rates of breast cancer puts McCall in health study

McCALL (AP) — Public health officials are trying to figure out if something about the McCall area is causing breast cancer in the community's mothers, wives and daughters.

The first phase of an investigation, prompted by what appears to be an unusually large number of cases, is expected to be finished by December.

"There was such a 'bloom' of us in '94 that have breast cancer," said Melanie Huffadot, a 38-year-old breast-cancer survivor.

From 1984 to 1993, 50 cases of breast cancer were reported in McCall and the rest of Valley County. Based on population estimates, that number should be closer to 35.

That is 123.2 cases for every 100,000 women in Valley County. The rate for the rest of the state is 85.4.

The Central District Health Department, with help from the state Department of Health and Welfare and other agencies, still is counting 1994 and 1995 cases — the ones that alarmed townsfolk and prompted the investigation.

So far, public health officials are not saying how many recent cases they are investigating. Two victims died recently, within a few weeks of each other.

By December, the Health Department will decide whether there really is an outsized number of cancer cases in Valley County.

If the answer is yes, they will start looking for possible environmental causes. Here, a high-fat diet and cigarette smoking all may play a role in determining who gets breast cancer. But in many cases, no one knows why one woman gets breast cancer and another does not.

Sanders' ankle surgery successful, say Cowboys

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Deion Sanders underwent successful surgery on his left ankle Monday, the Dallas Cowboys said.

"We are very, very encouraged by the results of the surgery," Cowboys spokesman Rich Dalrymple said after the one-hour procedure.

Dr. John Uribe of the Health South Doctor's Hospital performed the surgery on Sanders, who wrapped up his baseball season with the San Francisco Giants on Sunday.

Sanders signed a $35 million deal to play football for the Cowboys after rejecting offers from several other teams, including the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers, the team he played for last season.

ISU players to be sentenced Monday on battery charges

POCATELLO — Two current and two former Idaho State University football players will be sentenced next Monday after pleading guilty to misdemeanor battery.

The players originally were charged with statutory rape, but the charges were reduced to misdemeanors last week when prosecutors said the victims refused to testify.

Sixth District Judge Peter McDermott accepted guilty pleas Monday from Ike Johnson, 22, Thomas Washington, 21, Sam Carter, 22, and Derrick Carter, 22. He asked public defenders and Deputy Prosecutor Mark Murphy for reports on the men's background, past criminal record and sentencing recommendations.

Vote count dims Seattle stadium chances

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Prospects for keeping the Mariners in Seattle worsened dramatically Monday when a proposal for a new stadium fell behind in the latest count of absentee ballots.

With about 3,000 votes not yet counted, the measure was trailing by 1,535. A total of 245,092 voted "no" to raising the sales tax to help finance the $325 million retractable-roof stadium; 243,557 voted "yes."

The owners of the Mariners have threatened to sell or move the team if the referendum fails. "Yes" votes had been leading "no" votes since last Tuesday night.

As many as 2,000 more ballots may still be released Thursday. Proponents of the stadium plan had expected the strong play of the Mariners, who are closing in on the first division title in their 19-year history, to bolster their cause.

in the mail, and about 1,000 have not yet been opened, said John Charles, manager of elections and records for King County. The next vote count will be King County election officials counted an additional 18,190 absentee ballots Monday. A previous batch of about 36,000 was counted Thursday, after which the measure held a 310-vote margin in favor of passing. On election night last Tuesday, the proposal led by 4,000 votes.

The election won't be certified until Friday. A recount will not occur unless the person or group asking for it pays the $30,000 cost, Charles said.

Mariners chairman John Ellis said the team would have no comment until Thursday.

Owners of the Mariners say their current home, the concrete-roofed Kingdome, has held down attendance and helped lead to millions of dollars in losses.

The measure would finance most of the new stadium by increasing the county sales tax from 8.2 percent to 8.3 percent, or about 9 additional cents on every $100 spent. The cost to the average county resident was estimated at about $7.50 a year.

The Mariners would sign a new 20-year lease and contribute $45 million to the ballpark. It also would provide at least $170 million in bonds for Kingdome improvements demanded by the NFL Seahawks, and to cover the cost of extensive Kingdome roof repairs last year.

The Mariners are expected to lose $30 million this season, bringing the total loss to $67 million for Hiroshi Yamauchi, the president of Nintendo, in the 3½ years he has been majority owner.

Pass it up

Kristan Gilbert of the Twin Falls Christian Academy handles a serve from the Richfield JV team Monday afternoon in Twin Falls.

TFCA drops close one

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Christian Academy volleyball team came up short Monday afternoon, falling to the Richfield junior varsity in three games.

In a match with more long runs than an old pair of Cher's stockings, the Warriors rallied from seven points back to take the opening game, 15-12.

The Tigers came back in the second game for a 17-15 win that tied the match, then blew past the Academy 15-3 in the final.

Christian Academy coach Jodi Burkhead chalked the loss up to "a lot of inexperience."

"We're very inconsistent, very up-and-down," she said. The Warriors (3-4) put six freshmen, a sophomore and only one senior on the floor.

For most of the match, serving was the name of the game. Whichever team could put together a series of successful serves took control.

That was Richfield early, as Heather Waymont reeled off eight straight service points to put the Tigers up 9-2 in game one.

Control see-sawed for the next few minutes, and the visitors held a comfortable 12-6 margin when Ra'chana Glutz stepped to the service line for TFCA.

She served up the next three scores for the Warriors before a missed hit turned it back to Richfield.

Jillian Meyer quickly grabbed the service back for the Warriors with a return that bounced into and over the net. She then served six straight points, including three aces, to win the opener.

The Christian Academy appeared to have things well in hand in game two as well, bolting from a 4-3 lead to 10-3, largely on the strength of Kim Bell's serving.

But Richfield put together a string of its own and led 11-10 before Meyer again took control for TFCA.

Her kill ended the run, and her next four serves resulted in Warrior scores and a 14-11 advantage.

The lead was short-lived. Richfield battled through several side-outs, inching closer before drawing even at 14 and again at 15.

Lacey Swainston, the Tigers' most consistent server, put over the last three to seal the win.

The final count wasn't really much of one as the Warriors barely returned a ball over the net before Stephi Brown had served the Tigers to a 10-0 lead.

TFCA will try to avenge an early-season loss to Bliss when the Bears come to town for today's 3:30 p.m. match.

Shoshone sweeps Bliss, Hansen

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone Indians easily defeated Bliss and Hansen in a three-team volleyball meet Monday.

Niki Solosaga pounded 19 kills and Jenny Onaida contributed 18 service points for the Indians, as they crushed Bliss 15-2; 15-6 and Hansen 15-7, 15-8.

Danielle Ross came up with several key blocks against Hansen. Shoshone coach Larry Messick said.

The wins moved Shoshone to 13-3 on the season. They remain tied with Carnas County for the Class A-4 Northside Conference lead. The Indians face a key battle at second-place Carey Thursday night.

In Monday's other match, Hansen downed Bliss 15-9, 15-3.

In junior varsity action, Shoshone won both matches, with Hansen defeating Bliss.

Dodgers take NL West lead

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Eric Karros hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning Monday night, leading Los Angeles to a 4-3 victory over the Colorado Rockies that put the Dodgers alone in first place for the first time since Sept. 5.

Los Angeles, which opened a half-game lead over Colorado in the NL West, has five games left. The Rockies have six left, including two more against the Dodgers on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Baseball — B3

Colorado shortstop Walt Weiss made three errors, including one right before Karros hit his 31st homer and another in the third that led to an unearned run.

Mike Piazza had a two-run double and Ramon Martinez (17-7) scattered seven hits in eight innings with two strikeouts and no walks to win his sixth straight decision. Todd Worrell pitched the ninth for his 31st save.

Colorado scored single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth, going ahead 3-2 on Dante Bichette's 39th homer of the year.

Karros' homer on a 2-0 pitch from Bill Swift (8-3) came after Weiss, the shortstop for the 1989 World Series champion Oakland Athletics, bobbled Piazza's leadoff grounder.

Weiss, who has only 12 errors this season, also dropped a throw to second on a sacrifice bunt in the first. Piazza followed with a double into the right-field corner.

The other error by Weiss was on Chad Fonville's grounder in the third inning, but Fonville was erased on a double play.

The Rockies narrowed their deficit to 2-1 in the fourth on Andres Galarraga's sacrifice fly. He hit a 2-2 in the fifth when Weiss beat out a grounder, stole second, went to third on Swift's sacrifice and came home on a wild pitch.

Colorado could have fallen further behind in the first, but after Piazza doubled and Karros walked, Swift got Delino DeShields on a fly to left and Tim Wallach on a bouncer back to the mound that was turned into a double play.

Padres 7, Giants 4

SAN FRANCISCO — Ken Caminiti hit his 100th career homer and Tony Gwynn had three hits, including a two-run double, as the San Diego Padres beat the San Francisco Giants.

Gwynn, who leads the majors with a .367 average, went 3-for-4 with a double and extended their lead to 1½ games over the Giants for third place in the NL West. Both teams have been eliminated from playoff contention.

Brian Williams (3-9) had a career-high nine strikeouts in 6 1/3 innings and Brad Ausmus pitched the ninth for the Padres, who broke a three-game losing streak.

Terry Mulholland (5-12) allowed six runs and 10 hits in 6 1/3 innings.

Lions bring down 49ers

The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Detroit Lions, winless entering the game and some fans calling for coach Wayne Fontes' dismissal, delivered the biggest jolt of the NFL season Monday night.

They beat the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers 27-24 when Doug Brien missed a 41-yard field goal as time expired, the ball bouncing off the right upright.

In sending San Francisco to its first loss of the season, Jason Hanson kicked the winning 22-yard field goal with 1:12 remaining and the Lions prevailed, astoundingly, without a big game from Barry Sanders.

The Lions began the winning drive on their own 26 with no time-outs left. Scott Mitchell hit Herman Moore for 12 yards, Brett Perriman for 22 and Aubrey Matthews for 11.

That moved the Lions to the 49ers' 16.

Mitchell's sneak on third-and-1 was short by inches. But instead of going for the field goal, with 2:46 remaining, Fontes signaled Mitchell to go for it again. This time he slid off right guard David Lutz for 2 yards.

The Lions (1-3) then ran Sanders into the line three times, each for no gain, and Hanson scored for the winner.

Then Steve Young, who has directed so many winning drives for the 49ers, took his turn. Out of timeouts, he marched the 49ers (3-1) from their own 20 to the Lions' 22 to set up Brien's try.

Young completed 27 of 44 passes for 349 yards and two touchdowns, with one interception. Jerry Rice had 11 catches for 181 yards. It was Rice's 51st 100-yard game, breaking Don Maynard's NFL record.

Mitchell, taking up the slack when the 49ers' defense stacked up to stop Sanders, completed 28 of 42 for 291 yards and one touchdown. Mitchell also ran for one.

Sanders was held to 24 yards on 17 carries. Mitchell's 20-yard touchdown pass to Moore, followed by Mitchell's pass to Perriman for the 2-point conversion, gave Detroit a 24-17 lead with 10:41 left in the fourth quarter. But the Lions used their third and final timeout just before the conversion.

But the 49ers, with Young hitting 4 of 5 for 72 yards, including a 32-yard toss to Rice, tied it 24-24 on a 26-yard touchdown pass from Young to John Taylor with 5:53 remaining.

Fontes has been the target for frustrated fans, and Monday night's upset could not have been a more welcome tonic.

"I'm like a big buck out in the field," Fontes said leading to the game. "I'm doing those things."

Jet GM Steinberg Dies at 60

— Dick Steinberg, the architect of the Los Angeles Rams' and New England Patriots' only Super Bowl appearances, died Monday of stomach cancer at 60.

Steinberg had been the general manager of the New York Jets for the last six years, but he is best known for leading to Super Bowls two teams that have not returned since — the Rams in the 1979 season and the Patriots in 1985.

Steinberg spent four years in the Rams' front office as director of player personnel, 1976-80, and drafted future stars Bob Bradzinski, Norm Cromwell, Wendell Tyler and Vince Ferragamo all in the same spring. That team matured to win the NFC championship after the 1979 season before falling to the Pittsburgh Steelers in Super Bowl XVI, 31-19.

Fighter's injury draws ban call

BRISBANE, Australia — The Australian Medical Association renewed its call to ban boxing after a Filipino fighter sustained serious head injuries in a weekend bout.

Fernando Piccio remained in serious condition at Royal Brisbane Hospital on Tuesday, three days after he was knocked out in the seventh round of a lightweight bout with Australia's Selwyn Currie in Toowoomba.

The 22-year-old fighter sustained a suspected brain hemorrhage after the bout and was taken to Toowoomba General Hospital for treatment.

He was transferred to the Royal Brisbane Hospital early Sunday.

Stephen Phillips, president of the Queensland branch of the AMA, said his organization would like to see boxing eliminated.

"It is a sport that is designed to damage somebody's brain and that does it," Phillips said.

The hospital said Tuesday that Piccio's condition was unchanged. "He remains dangerously ill and unconscious," the statement said.

bullets. They want my rack. They want my rack on the wall. But I told my team to be strong. I'll keep dodging until they hit me. If it happens, it happens. But I'll go down fighting."

After Brien missed a 47-yard field goal attempt, Mitchell hit 7 of 10 passes for five touchdowns, including a 47-yard touchdown pass to Chris Spielman in the first quarter.

Chris Spielman picked off Young's pass intended for Brent Jones and the Lions made it

10-0 on Mitchell's 1-yard sneak early in the second quarter.

The 49ers answered with Brien's 23-yard field goal to make it 10-3, but Hanson matched it with a 38-yarder for a 13-13 tie. Young took the 49ers' 35-yard lead in the third quarter, completing 4 of 5 for 21 yards, including two to Rice for 58 yards. Nate Singleton's tough catch while being tackled by Robert Maschen enabled the 49ers to close the gap to 13-10 at halftime.

Hanson's 18-yard field goal gave Detroit a 16-10 lead early in the third quarter, but Young and Rice took over once again to fashion the 49ers' first lead.

Young completed 3 of 4 for 60 yards, two to Rice for 57, as he drove the 49ers 80 yards in 10 plays for the go-ahead score with 4:51 left in the third quarter.

Houston hangs tough to beat Pirates, 10-5

Perez posts bond, faces rape charge

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros nearly blew a six-run lead before pulling away from the Pittsburgh Pirates in a 10-5 victory Monday night that kept them close in the wild card race.

Brian Hunter had two hits and three RBIs and Dave Magadan had two hits and two RBIs for Houston, which began the night 14 games behind Los Angeles. The Dodgers played the Colorado Rockies in a tie game.

Major Leagues

Houston got three runs in the first and three in the third for a 6-0 lead, but Pittsburgh got five straight singles off Mike Hampton in the fifth and scored five runs.

Rick Wilkins' RBI single in the sixth gave Houston an insurance run, and the Astros scored three more in the eighth.

Doug Brocail (6-3), who relieved Hampton in the fifth and allowed a pair of run-scoring groundouts, got the victory. Mike White took the loss for Pittsburgh, which dropped to fourth in a row.

John Canguloni singled to start the Astros' first and was sacrificed to second base by Craig Biggio. After left fielder Bagwell walked, Derrick May's double scored Canguloni. Magadan followed with a single to center, scoring Bagwell and May.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 0
CHICAGO — Frank Castillo came within one strike of pitching the first "big" no-hitter in 23 years, losing it on two-out triple in the ninth inning by Bernard Gilkey in a 7-0 win Monday night over St. Louis.

Castillo, who struck out a career-high 13, fanned the first two batters in the ninth and then got ahead 0-2 on Gilkey.

But on a 2-2 pitch, Gilkey hit a line drive to right-center field. Right fielder Jeremy Sosa charged and dived, but the ball bounced several feet away and rolled into the outfield.

Castillo is the fifth pitcher to lose a no-hitter in the final inning this season. He was trying to become the first Cub pitcher to throw a no-hitter since Milt Pappas against San Diego on Sept. 2, 1972, which also was the last no-hitter at Wrigley Field.

Castillo's no-hitter was the last no-hitter pitched by a Cub pitcher this year, beating Florida 7-0 on July 14.

Expos 9, Marlins 0
MIAMI — Will Cordero hit two home runs Monday night to lead the Expos to a 9-0 victory over the Marlins at Marlins Park. Cordero hit a 162,300, the smallest ever to see the Marlins at Joe Robbie Stadium.

The previous low home crowd in the Marlins' three-year history was 16,332 against Houston on Aug. 28 of this year. Montreal moved into the tie with Florida and the Marlins in the NL East.

Kirk Ruster (4-3) retired the first 13 batters. He allowed three hits in 5 2-3 innings and hit Heredia pitched 3 1-3 innings for the first time of the season. Cordero hit a two-run homer in a five-inning first, then added a solo home run second. He singled and later scored.

Mets 2, Reds 1, 5 Innings
NEW YORK — Jose Vizcaino scored in a wild pitch in the sixth inning moments before the game was stopped by a rain delay.

Seattle Mariners' third-year manager Lou Piniella said, "We haven't won anything yet."

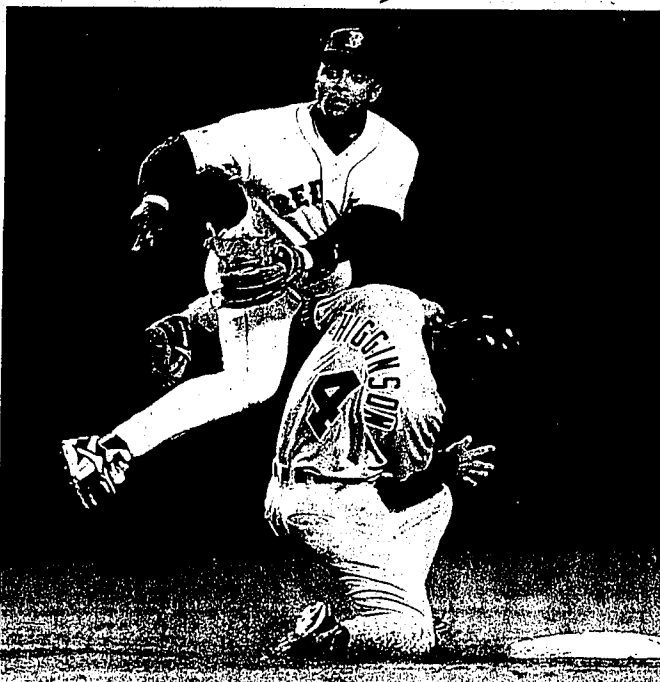

No, they haven't. But they're getting close.

When the Mariners play California in the Kingdom on Tuesday and Wednesday, they will be in position to clinch the division.

Seattle has won 21 of its last 49 games. The Mariners overtook the Angels because California collapsed and because Seattle is playing the best baseball in the team's 19-year history.

Mariner pitcher, Marlins' outfielder earn weekly honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Seattle Mariners pitcher Randy Johnson and outfielder Gary Sheffield of the Florida Marlins were chosen Monday as major league baseball's players of the week.

Left-hander Johnson was 2-0 with a 0.59 earned run average last week while pitching the Mariners into first place in the American League West. He also struck out 25 batters in 16 1-3 innings to earn AL player honors for the third time this season.

Sheffield won honors in the National League by hitting three homers and driving in 10 runs. He also batted .471.

ATLANTA (AP) — Carlos Perez of the Montreal Expos posted bond and walked out of jail Monday, several hours after a judge refused to drop rape charges against him.

The 24-year-old rookie pitcher was arrested Saturday on charges of rape and aggravated sodomy after a 20-year-old woman accused him of forcing her to have sex in his hotel room after they met on a blind date.

Perez, wearing a multicolored shirt and matching vest, a black T-shirt and jeans, hugged his lawyer before leaving jail. He said he wants to pitch this week, and Expos general manager Kevin Malone said Perez could be on the mound as early as Thursday in Montreal against Cincinnati.

He'll rejoin the team Tuesday in Miami, where the Expos are playing the Florida Marlins.

"All I can say is that I'm not guilty," Perez said.

The pitcher was released on $50,000 bond after Municipal Court Judge Howard Johnson turned over the case to Fulton County Superior Court.

Superior Court Judge Philip Elbergh agreed to let Perez go free but said he must have no contact with the victim. Perez' attorney, Guy Davis, made arrangements for the bond.

"There was no force — there was no evidence of that," Davis said. "He said everything was consensual."

Earlier in the day, Perez shook shaking his head "no" and holding his hands clasped behind his back. The woman told Johnson how he pinned her on the bed in his hotel room and raped and sodomized her hours after his 5-1 loss to the Atlanta Braves on Friday night.

Judge refuses to drop charges

Dressed in red prison pants and shirt, Perez listened as his accuser said the fact she had no choice but to go with him to his hotel room.

She testified she met Perez at a bar Friday night and gave him her telephone number, then went outside with him to wait for friends to pick her up.

When a cab came by, Perez said, "Come on, let's go," she said.

She said she knew Perez probably wanted to have sex, but she went to his room anyway because she thought she could resist him.

"I was concerned about being with him, but I felt if I told him I didn't want to do anything, that would be it," she said.

Nomo's secret hurting may disarm Dodgers

Knight-Ridder News Service

LOS ANGELES — Tony Gwynn knows pitchers the way cowboys know dead horses, having dissected the best of them over a 14-year career that has seen him hit better than 300 consecutive seasons.

That's Stan Musial, Ty Cobb and Ted Williams territory. So when the future Hall of Famer offers the opinion he did Sunday about Nomo, it is probably wise to take notice and call the media.

"But to be honest with you, I think Nomo is hurting," said the former Poly High star. "He was getting his fastball and forkball up."

"His fastball looked like it was coming in at around 85 (mph), and he wasn't that sharp. I saw him at the All-Star Game and he wasn't the same pitcher. He only went five innings to day. Something is up."

Dodger stock is way up after Sunday's 6-2 win over the Padres, which left them a half-game behind the Colorado Rockies behind their rival Padres in for a three-game, pennant-deciding series starting tonight.

But what about Nomo? Sunday, he had zip on his pitches, as in zero. It was only through good karma and great defense that he exited after five innings and 90 pitches with a 3-2 lead. A wild pitch scored one, he got home runs for two doubles in the fourth, and only a pickoff and great catch by Wallace kept the Padres scoreless in the fifth.

In his previous start, Tuesday against the Giants, Nomo allowed seven hits, five walks and six runs in five innings.

He has an ERA over 4.00 in his last six starts and has had only two quality outings in his last eight appearances.

Media outnumber players at Riley's 1st Heat practice

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The media outnumbered the players Monday when Pat Riley held his first workout as coach of the Miami Heat.

The start of a three-day mini-camp drew 100 reporters, all hoping for an invitation to training camp next week. Some 20 reporters and photographers were on hand to chronicle the event.

Riley said it was good to be back on the court after an eventful offseason. Following lengthy negotiations between the Heat and his former team, the New York Knicks, Riley signed a contract Sept. 2 for an estimated $15 million over five years.

The good news is that this summer when I didn't think anything was going to get done," Riley said. "One day you feel like it's going to happen, the next day you feel like it could be forever."

But believe me, I've left it in my rearview mirror. I'm not looking back. It's business as usual — a dating tie to mid-August.

The Dodgers say there's nothing wrong with Nomo that can't be fixed by a manicurist. Nomo has had more problems this year than the cast of "Melrose Place." Sunday's effort was described with the old baseball axiom of off day.

"I can't explain it," said Piazza, his catcher. "He didn't have much velocity today; he made a couple of mistakes. But he hung in."

Nomo agreed he didn't have much velocity. He said he wasn't going to send me into the press for an answer, though, perhaps in fear of finding one.

Tuesday night, before Nomo's previous start, Tommy Lasorda was asked what he made of this oddball pennant race, meaning baseball's new wild-card invitation system.

"You mean without Nomo?" Lasorda asked back.

Lasorda didn't elaborate on the confused point, and the moment quickly passed.

As of Tuesday, the Dodger plan was for Nomo to skip his scheduled start Sunday against the Padres so he would be available for the Rockies.

That plan changed after his outing against the Giants. Now Nomo will miss the Rockies altogether unless he is asked to pitch Wednesday on two days' rest.

Considering the Dodgers were willing to let Nomo have a few 130-pitch days at the start of the season, and the importance of this three-game series, and Nomo's status as staff ace or at least second-in-command to Ramon Martinez, it is all quite curious.

Once the Dodgers' secret weapon, Nomo now won't be their big secret.

The good news is that this summer when I didn't think anything was going to get done," Riley said. "One day you feel like it's going to happen, the next day you feel like it could be forever."

But believe me, I've left it in my rearview mirror. I'm not looking back. It's business as usual — a good practice with the players working hard."

The occasion was hardly formal for basketball's most glamorous coach, with Riley unshaven and chewing gum as he led a two-hour workout in shorts and a Hot polo shirt.

Among those invited to attend the mini-camp were eight veterans and two 7-footers, including Alan Ogg, who was the Heat's 12th man in 1990-92. The most experienced player was 6-11 Greg Foster, who has been with five NBA teams the past five seasons.

"We need some bigger players," Riley said. "We ended up bringing in nine big guys, so we have some size. Hopefully in a couple of days, we can pick out a couple of guys that we can bring back to training camp."

Riley has yet to meet with most of the Heat players under contract, but he hopes to do so before training camp begins Oct. 6.

Seattle Mariners Tino Martinez, right, and Doug Strange celebrate after Martinez hit the game-winning home run in the ninth inning of the Oakland Athletics Sunday. The Mariners have been celebrating a 1-0 victory.

Seattle has won 21 of its last 49 games. The Mariners overtook the Angels because California collapsed and because Seattle is playing the best baseball in the team's 19-year history.

Early season shows AFC deeper, more interesting

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

With a quarter of the NFL season already gone, one thing is evident: The AFC may lose the Super Bowl for the 12th straight year, but it's deeper, better, and far more interesting than the NFC, which has two legitimate teams in DALLAS and SAN FRANCISCO — and maybe Minnesota.

• Could the Rams be 4-0 in the AFC? No. Could the Falcons be 3-1 in the AFC? They've beaten three teams who are a combined 1-10 and the one win was by the Jets — over expansion Jacksonville.

• What's worse, watching Tampa Bay beat Washington 14-6 or Houston beat Cincinnati 38-28 in that classic Chris Chandler-Jeff Blake shootout? • The NFC East, which won four straight Super Bowls with three different teams from 1990 through 1993, has Dallas on top followed by four teams that are 1-3. If any of them makes the playoffs it will be with records of 8-8, although 7-9 isn't out of the question.

• The AFC West is now the best

They're clearly not in a class with Miami, Oakland, Cleveland or San Diego, and would be no better than even against Kansas City, New England, Denver or even Buffalo and Indianapolis (where they go next week). And they couldn't approach Pittsburgh if Neil O'Donnell were back. (Imagine, making Neil O'Donnell into a star.)

Want an assessment? "We played terrible," said Kevin Ross of the 3-1 Falcons after they stumbled to a 13-3 win over the Jets, who stumbled even more badly.

"I'm not really satisfied with the performance, including mine. We've got to play better, we've got to play harder, we've got to play smarter. If we're going to be a playoff team, we can't talk about it. We've got to demonstrate it."

Actually, in the NFC, that's not necessarily true. DALLAS and SAN FRANCISCO need someone to beat up on in the early rounds of the playoffs.

ROOKIE WATCH: Tony Boselli, the second overall pick in the draft, finally got into a game at left tackle for Jacksonville on Sunday. Is it possible the first-round of the class of '95 is finally starting to catch up with Wayne Chrebet (free agent, Jets), Corey Fuller (third-rounder, Vikings) and Terrell Davis (sixth-rounder, Broncos) who have been the rookies of the year so far?

Sunday was something of a coming out day for big-name first-rounders, although not everything they did was positive.

• Rashawn Salaam, the Heisman Trophy winner and 21st overall pick, made his first start for Chicago because of injuries to Robert Green, Raymont Harris and Lewis Tillman. He needs work — 16 carries for 40 yards, a fumble that led to a Rams' touchdown and a botched handoff from Erik Kramer that was returned 73 yards for a score by Toby Wright.

• Tyrone Wheatley, the 17th overall pick. After a holdout and nagging injuries, he spelled Hampton and ran for 54 yards in 10 carries against New Orleans, including a 19-yard TD run on which he ran over cornerback Jimmy Spencer. "I love getting a defensive back in the open field," said Wheatley, whom Dan Reeves wanted to bypass for Salaam.

He also opened the game with a 32-yard kickoff return that jump started the Giants' first drive, but cost the season points since the final game of the 1986 season.

• Boselli, who played for the first time after injuring his knee the first week of camp. He was matched against Sean Jones (not, unfortunately, Reggie White) and held his own against a venerable pass rusher.

With Ki-Jana Carter, the No. 1 pick, gone for the season with a knee injury, the top No. 1 picks have been Napoleon Kaufman of the Raiders, who's rushed for 162 yards in 3 carries; Craig Newsome, the Packers' cornerback, who was 32nd and last (a second-round pick in the old days), tight end Kyle Brady of the Jets and defensive end Mike Mamula of the Eagles.

STERLING, ANYONE? Robert Brooks, who replaced Sterling Sharpe at South Carolina and now with the Packers, is ahead of Sharpe's replacement, Rodney Peete, as he threw. The pass floated to Raiders' cornerback Terry McDaniel, setting up another touchdown.

pace that would give him 100 receptions for the season.

That's more than the 90 Brooks had in his first three seasons, 58 of them last year, when Sharpe was hurt for a portion of the time.

That also gives credence to the theory that Favre often looked on Sharpe too much until last year, when he emerged as one of the NFL's best young quarterbacks.

TEASERS: Joe Montana is gone, but there are journeyman quarterbacks who from time to time can look like him. The problem is that it's from time to time.

On Sunday: • Chris Chandler, Oilers, 23 of 36 for 352 yards and four touchdowns; Jeff Blake, Bengals, 24 of 46 for 356 yards and two touchdowns; Chandler wins, 38-28.

• Erik Kramer, Bears, 27 of 36 for 317 yards and four touchdowns; Kramer loses to Rams 34-28.

• Dave Krieg, Cardinals, 24 of 33 for 324 yards and two TDs against the Cowboys. Krieg also throws three interceptions and loses 34-20.

Wounded Smith promises to saddle up for Cowboys' game with Washington

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Emmitt Smith had a sore left elbow and a bit of a smile.

Pointing to the swelling still evident on his elbow, the NFL's all-time rushing leader said Monday he got lucky with the injury sustained in the fourth quarter of a 34-20 Dallas Cowboys victory Sunday over Arizona.

"It's doing fine, believe me," Smith said. "I'll be at practice Wednesday and I'll play against the Washington Redskins."

Smith fell hard on the elbow and lost feeling in his fingers. "It scared me, particularly when I couldn't feel three of my fingers," Smith said. "There was some pain."

Smith, who has been hampered the last two seasons with shoulder and hamstring problems, was at Valley Ranch late Sunday night undergoing ice and pressure treatments.

"It's gone down a lot," Smith said. "I was worried there might be some bone fragments floating around in there. But there's no problem. It will be back to normal by Sunday."

It's going to take more than just a banged-up elbow to keep Smith, who had 116 yards rushing on Sunday, on the bench.

"You're talking about one tough man," said offensive tackle Nate Newton. "He's a football player, a tough customer."

Smith, who has three rushing titles in five years, is off to his best start with four straight 100-yard rushing games. He has 543 yards rushing and at his current pace would finish with 2,172.

Eric Dickerson has the NFL record of 2,277 yards in one season.

Other than Smith's injury, the Cowboys escaped relatively unscathed against Buddy Ryan's hard-hitting team.

The Cowboys expect offensive tackle Erik Williams to return this week for the game against Washington.

Although Ron Stone filled in well for him against the Cardinals.

Williams was slowed by a calf injury in his left leg.

Dallas coach Barry Switzer said, although the Cowboys are 4-0, they have played less than perfectly.

"It's a bit surprising to see some of the mistakes we are making," Switzer said. "We had Jay Novack drop a pass and you don't see that very often."

The Cowboys have a three-game lead in the NFC East but Switzer said it doesn't mean a thing.

"I don't think about being ahead in the division with this many games to go," Switzer said. "I just hope we stay healthy."

Although Smith was injured with the Cowboys owning a 14-point lead late in the game, he said he had to leave Smith in the contest.

"We had a ballgame on our hands," Switzer said.

Dallas Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith scores against the Arizona Cardinals on a one-yard run in the second quarter of their game on Sunday. Despite a sore elbow, Smith says he will be able to play in their game against the Redskins.

Bruce: Another castoff resurrected by Raiders

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — The Raiders have made an art of recycling players. So it was no surprise Aundrae Bruce figured prominently in the comeback against Philadelphia.

Playing like a defensive lineman who merited being picked first in the NFL draft, Bruce fought his way past the Eagles' Antonio Davis in the second quarter and dropped Randall Cunningham for a 13-yard sack on third down.

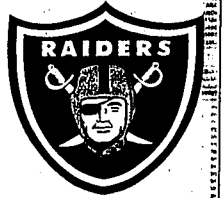

The Raiders were trailing 17-3, and coach Mike White said Bruce's sack was a turning point.

As Oakland took control in the second half on its way to a 48-17 rout, Bruce smacked Cunningham's replacement, Rodney Peete, as he threw. The pass floated to Raiders' cornerback Terry McDaniel, setting up another touchdown.

Bruce, in his eighth season, was the first player selected in the 1988 draft, chosen by the Atlanta Falcons. The former Auburn stand-out failed to live up to his promise, though, and finally was signed by the Raiders as a free agent in 1992. His stock didn't grow much with the Raiders, who waived him last month. Then defensive end Nolan Harrison had to have disc surgery, and Bruce was on his way back.

"I think that's a story there," White said Monday. "Two or three weeks ago, to make a roster spot, we stuck him on the waiver wire and somebody could have picked him up."

"To me, what he did (against the Eagles) started the game back in our direction. He had two sacks, tipped two balls. Aundrae is a guy that has pass-rushing qualities, has physical qualities, and for whatever reason, coaches have given up on him when he doesn't fit the total defensive line model.

"He's perceived as having talent, but not putting it all together. They say he's a guy with a great ability that doesn't make plays. So I think this game was a tremendous breakthrough for him. I think that's what everybody's been looking for from him for the past eight years."

Bruce, who said he has learned that "talent only takes you so far," says he feels comfortable in the Raiders' defense.

"I like it when you make the offense read to what you're doing," he said. "All you have to do is pin your ears back and 'Pow.' I'm even calling some stunts now. I still want to show what I can do."

Holtz, Irish prepare for Ohio State rivalry

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — This is the week Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz gets to look at The File.

With all the problems he's had so far this season, Holtz hasn't had much spare time to worry about this weekend's game with Ohio State. He's read every newspaper article he sees, every letter he gets, even general comments he hears, are stored in The File.

Now, it's finally time to pull it out.

"I'll read all the articles and all the letters and all the comments that have been made, I will miss the football game," Holtz said. "It is that thick."

The hype over the game between No. 7 Ohio State and No. 15 Notre Dame has been building for months. It's been 60 years since the Irish upset Ohio State 18-13 in "The Game of the Century," and the Buckeyes are still holding a grudge.

T-shirts advertising the game have been on sale at both school's bookstores since last spring, and getting a ticket is next-to-impossible. When the Irish (3-1) step into Ohio Stadium, they'll be able to feel the hostility, Holtz said.

In fact, Holtz said the last time Notre Dame faced a similar situation was 1989, when the No. 1 Irish traveled to No. 7 Miami in a game billed as "The Catholics vs. the Convicts II." The Hurricanes beat the Irish 27-10 and ended the year as national champions. Notre Dame finished No. 2.

"The crowd is going to be so loud, the environment very hostile," Holtz said. "There will be an air of electricity in that stadium that I don't think is duplicated very many times during the course of your career."

Holtz has tried to downplay the game last season, saying he hasn't thought about it much, that it's "not another of Notre Dame's big games."

But he admitted Sunday that no matter how hard he tries to forget it, going back to Ohio State is always in the back of his mind.

Holtz grew up in Ohio and played football at Kent State. He spent one year (1968) as an assistant at Ohio State under the legendary Woody Hayes before getting his first head coaching job at William & Mary.

The Buckeyes went 10-0 and won the national championship the year Holtz was there. They also won the Rose Bowl by defeating a Southern Cal team led by O.J. Simpson.

Holtz also was asked to apply for the Ohio State job when Hayes was fired in 1978.

"Being on a great staff and being part of Ohio State, working for Woody Hayes and being in your home state was just a very, very special thing," Holtz said. "That game means a lot to me coming from the state of Ohio."

There was a time when Holtz didn't know if he'd be at the game. After Holtz had emergency spinal cord surgery two weeks ago, doctors told him he'd be out three weeks.

But Holtz was back at Saturday's game calling plays from the press box, and he plans to do the same at Ohio State.

Price tries to keep Cougars low key for Nebraska clash

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — The last thing Washington State coach Mike Price needed Monday as the Cougars were preparing for their showdown against No. 2 Nebraska was to have a player make the Cornhuskers' locker-room bulletin board.

So Price spent much time during his weekly telephone news conference Sunday trying to play down the brash prediction by senior defensive end Dwayne Sanders that Washington State would win Saturday.

Price said that Sanders' remarks were made in the euphoria of the Cougars' 24-16 victory over UCLA Saturday.

"I don't know how much video

Dwayne had watched on Nebraska before he made that statement," Price said. "But I'd sure rather have him make that statement than say, 'Oh, no, we're going to get killed by Nebraska by a 20-point margin.'"

Not that Price doesn't want his players to be confident going against the nation's top rushing attack, averaging 60 points and 507 yards per game.

Sanders anchors a Cougars defense that is one of the best against the rush, allowing only 69.7 yards per game.

"I think he felt good about his play (against UCLA), and he should have, because he played good," Price said. "I think it was just part of the overzealous confidence and good feeling that he had at that moment."

"At least he's confident, but I don't think he's watched any video or seen them play enough to comment too much about this team."

Asked about a statement that Nebraska considers Washington State its biggest challenge to date, Price said: "That was probably stated by some guys who haven't watched much video on us, either."

One was Brian Burgdorf, who has the difficult task of replacing Jay Barker as Alabama's quarterback. On Monday, Burgdorf seemed convinced he'd be called on to throw more.

"Against Arkansas, we didn't throw the ball downfield," said Burgdorf, who was 6-of-17 for an interception against the Razorbacks. "That's tough. You've got to keep those defensive backs honest."

Coach Gene Stallings, meanwhile, refused to divulge what he or Smith might do.

"I have wanted to (throw more) and haven't necessarily got it done," he said. "I don't think that's going to happen any more."

Burgdorf said it would not be a matter of using the Tide's playbooks. Using some plays that haven't been used before.

Price said he was confident that his players would be able to handle the challenge.

"I think that's a story there," White said Monday. "Two or three weeks ago, to make a roster spot, we stuck him on the waiver wire and somebody could have picked him up."

"To me, what he did (against the Eagles) started the game back in our direction. He had two sacks, tipped two balls. Aundrae is a guy that has pass-rushing qualities, has physical qualities, and for whatever reason, coaches have given up on him when he doesn't fit the total defensive line model."

"He's perceived as having talent, but not putting it all together. They say he's a guy with a great ability that doesn't make plays. So I think this game was a tremendous breakthrough for him. I think that's what everybody's been looking for from him for the past eight years."

Bruce, who said he has learned that "talent only takes you so far," says he feels comfortable in the Raiders' defense.

"I like it when you make the offense read to what you're doing," he said. "All you have to do is pin your ears back and 'Pow.' I'm even calling some stunts now. I still want to show what I can do."

Burgdorf said it would not be a matter of using the Tide's playbooks. Using some plays that haven't been used before.

Price said he was confident that his players would be able to handle the challenge.

"I think that's a story there," White said Monday. "Two or three weeks ago, to make a roster spot, we stuck him on the waiver wire and somebody could have picked him up."

Montana, NAU players earn weekly honors

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Dave Dickenson of Montana was named this week's Big Sky offensive player of the week and Northern Arizona's Jerome Herring won the defensive honors.

Montana's Kenyatta Morgan was named Big Sky special teams player of the week.

Dickenson, a 5-11, 175-pound quarterback from Green Falls, Mont., hit on 26 of his 38 passes for 383 yards, and set a school record with six touchdowns passes Saturday night. The Montana Grizzlies defeated Boise State, which was ranked third nationally, 54-28.

The week's top defensive player was Herring, a 5-11, 260-pound junior defensive tackle from Renton, Wash., who had 10 tackles, six of them solos, and three quarterback sacks for minus-18 yards in leading Northern Arizona to a 68-7 defeat of Cal State-Northridge.

Morgan, a 5-7, 150-pound sophomore wide receiver and return specialist from Inglewood, Calif., returned a Southwest Texas State punt 72 yards for a score, the longest punt return in the Big Sky this season.

He also had a kickoff return that went for 23 yards, and had 132 all-purpose yards in leading Montana State to a 45-14 victory over southwest Texas State.

Coach Gene Stallings, meanwhile, refused to divulge what he or Smith might do.

"I have wanted to (throw more) and haven't necessarily got it done," he said. "I don't think that's going to happen any more."

California man killed in roll-over accident

BURLEY — A 69-year-old California man was killed on Interstate 84 Monday afternoon when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel on the way to visit his son in Jerome, according to an Idaho State Police dispatcher.

Andrew Stifing of La Quinta, Calif., was killed at 2:50 p.m. when his car left the road and rolled over at milepost 240 about 32 miles southeast of Burley, said ISP dispatcher Dee Silver.

A passenger, Carmen Osorio, 71, also of La Quinta, was in critical condition at Cassia Regional Medical Center and was expected to be flown to the Latter-Day Saints Hospital in Salt Lake City. His wife, Beverly, 70, was in satisfactory condition, according to a Cassia hospital spokeswoman.

Wendell City Council will meet, discuss sewer system

WENDELL — The City Council will hold a special meeting at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday to discuss a new sewer system for the west side of town, City Clerk-Treasurer Raquel Braga said Monday.

Braga said the council would hear an engineer's report on the project and might vote to construct the system, but she referred further questions to Mayor Lynn Nelson, who did not return a phone call.

Also on the agenda is the city's fee structure, Braga said.

Man in supposed kidnapping earns 6 months in boot camp

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man who fought with a purported kidnapping victim last winter will spend six months in boot camp for violating probation, a judge said Monday.

Fifth District Judge Roger Burdick said he "took a significant chance" by sentencing 21-year-old Jonathan Marsh to probation, but that sending Marsh to prison "is no one's wish at this time."

In March, Marsh pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting an attack against 23-year-old Justin Schoenauer of Twin Falls. Kidnapping charges against four men who participated in the Nov. 20 attack were dropped.

Monday in court, Marsh admitted using marijuana and methamphetamine, failing to pay his court-ordered restitution, driving with an invalid license, and changing jobs and homes without permission from his probation officer. Probation officers found marijuana in his home in August, but Marsh said the drugs weren't his.

Marsh will spend six months in a military-style program in northern Idaho, then probation. Marsh could have faced two to four years in prison.

Man charged with molesting sentenced to 3 years probation

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man who was charged with molesting a little girl was sentenced to three years' probation.

Ricky Alan Coates, 29, pleaded guilty to felony injury to a child midway through his trial on the charge in August, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Richard Bevan.

Witnesses testified that the child told them Coates kissed her on her mouth and chest while baby-sitting her on Feb. 4. But the girl was unlikely to testify during the trial. During an earlier court hearing she only whispered "yes" when lawyers asked whether Coates made her uncomfortable, but she refused to elaborate.

Fifth District Judge Roger Burdick said Coates had taken "good steps" by seeking treatment for alcoholism and to remember the "abject terror" of his arrest and trial as a deterrent from further crimes.

If he violates the terms of his probation, he could face three to six years in prison, Burdick said. Coates must stay away from bars, commit no further crimes and submit to daily intoxication tests for the first 90 days of his probation.

County rejoins dumping district

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County renewed a relationship Monday with the regional garbage-dumping district it spurned three years ago.

With only one week remaining before the retirement of Solid Waste Director Darrell Heider, county commissioners approved a landfill-management contract with the Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District, Commissioner Dennis Maughan said.

For $39,500 in the first year, the seven-member team headed by Director Terry Schultz will take over daily operations of the county's landfill at Hub Butte and launch Twin Falls toward countywide recycling and composting programs, Maughan said.

Three years ago, Twin Falls left the six-county solid-waste region and its plans for the Miner Butte landfill to build its own dump. But now, Maughan said, a renewed alliance is the best way to go.

"It really is a good deal for us," he said. Hiring another qualified manager would have cost the county a salary of $35,000 or $45,000 plus the additional cost of a contract with an engineering firm, Commissioner Brent Reinke said earlier.

But with the deal from the regional team, the county will also get public education on rubbish reduction and personnel training on accepting hazardous wastes at the landfill, Maughan said.

Schultz said Monday that his team will spend this week "getting familiar with the system" at Hub Butte and will begin next week to implement its public awareness programs.

Twin Falls County has already bought 200 composting bins for the regional team to distribute. The bins cost $35, but the county will sell them to customers for $15, Maughan said.

A recycling program using bins in central locations should be "up and running" within 60 to 90 days, Maughan said. Door-to-door collection for recycling is further away, he said.

The regional solid-waste team is also working on innovative ways to meet Department of Environmental Quality regulations on daily cover at the landfill while reducing the volume of the cover by 40 to 50 percent, he said.

DEQ requires 6 to 8 inches of soil covering every day's trash at the landfill. Under that practice, Maughan said, too much of the volume in the dump's rapidly filling first cell is taken up by dirt.

At the current rate of fill, the cell has only a 36- or 38-month life expectancy, Reinke said earlier. Commissioners would like to raise that to 30 months.

New director takes BID helm

Change comes as district's role is questioned

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Elaine Steele went to work Monday as executive director of the Business Improvement District, hoping to strengthen the downtown association.

"There's doers and there's wishers," she said, "I am a doer."

Steele, a former business owner and corporate trainer, described herself as motivated and committed to unifying downtown merchants and property owners.

Economic success of the whole depends on the success of each part, she said.

Some downtown merchants have said they receive no benefit from the BID and have signed petitions asking that membership in the organization be voluntary. But improved communication between the organization and its member merchants will be the key to resolving such complaints in the city's core area, Steele said.

She said she has a vision for downtown Twin Falls — "I have my own goals and my own agenda" — but wants to concentrate first on hearing the "vision and the dreams" of others downtown.

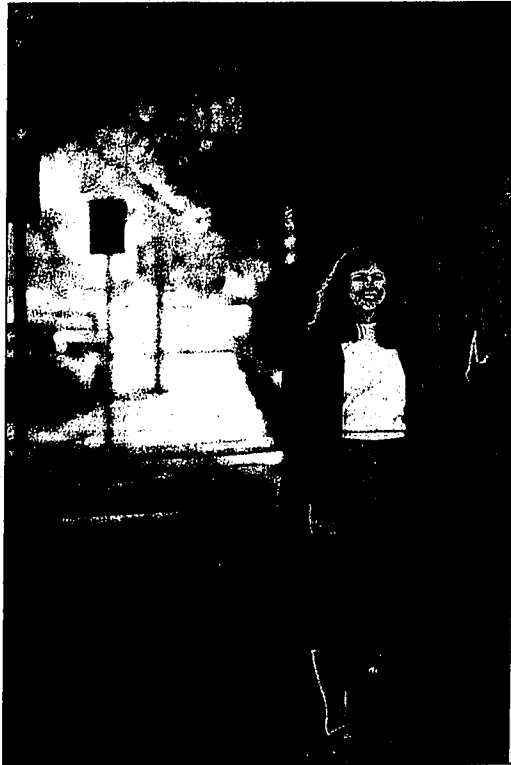

Happily, she said, they'll also tell her how she can help them make those dreams come true.

Steele said she will begin a systematic tour of downtown businesses next week, starting with those in the BID's outer core. She hopes to meet with all of the organization's approximately 240 members by the end of the year, she said.

"In any community, if downtown isn't successful, it hurts the whole city," said Steele, who also said she will mount an aggressive campaign to get the architecture, history and redevelopment of downtown Twin Falls featured in a national magazine.

With the help of the BID's promotions committee, Steele will soon finalize plans for downtown events at Halloween and Christmas, she said. Mardi Gras in February and St. Patrick's Day in March will be likely candidates for the next downtown promotions, she said.

Steele, a resident of Twin Falls for more than two years, recently earned a bachelor's degree in corporate training from Idaho State University. For two years, she was an administrative director for a company that served businesses in four major California metropolitan areas. She developed and copyrighted a corporate training program called "Life Skills and Career Preparedness," worked as a trainer for Redken Laboratories and for 13 years owned a retail business in Santa Barbara, Calif., she said.

Her position with the BID is part-time, so Steele still has time to paint, take college courses and help lead the young

Methodist Church, which her husband, Jerry, pastors.

Her husband, who is also a chaplain for the Twin Falls Police Department, has had two liver transplants, and Steele said her most difficult job so far was serving as a caregiver for him. The couple has one daughter, who is now attending college.

Sheriff puts some blame on ex-jailer

By William Brock
Times-News writer

GOODING — Sheriff Jim Jax says his former jail administrator deserves some of the blame for a budget shortfall that left the department without deputies for about two weeks, but the administrator says the jail's budget was in fine shape when he quit in February.

"He's blaming everybody but himself," said former jail administrator Bob Morgado. "The budget was fine when I resigned. We were on track."

"I'm not saying I'm totally blameless," Jax said Monday. "My biggest crime is that I trusted someone I never should have trusted, and I didn't count my change."

On Sept. 8, the sheriff announced that he was laying off all six of his deputies. On Sept. 20, a district judge held the county could shift money from "goods and services" to bridge its law enforcement gap.

In the interim, the Idaho State Police patrolled the roads of Gooding County. The county will not be getting a bill from the ISP, Jax said Monday.

The embattled sheriff, who is facing a recall petition drive, said he "should have caught" the fact that jail spending was headed into the red — but he insisted the problem got started while Morgado was still running the jail. Morgado never told him about the looming budget deficit, Jax said.

"He knew about the budget," Morgado said. "The county commissioners visited him about the shortfall and even the clerk visited him. He wouldn't cooperate with the commissioners at all."

Commissioners left notes asking Jax to meet with them, then resorted to subpoenas to ensure the sheriff's presence. Jax said the notes weren't presented to him personally and in some cases, they only gave a couple of hours for him to change his schedule.

"I don't need a subpoena, but I need somebody to make sure I know," he said. Jax said he only missed one meeting that he was aware of, and that was because he "had to run out the door on some sort of emergency."

The 1994-95 jail budget got knocked out of kilter by a number factors, Jax said. A Red Cross for about four years. The only other disaster-relief mission he recalls her going on was after an apartment-building fire in Twin Falls, he said.

The Red Cross is taking monetary donations to help victims of Hurricane Marilyn and other disasters. Contributions also may be sent to the Sawtooth Chapter of the American Red Cross, 718 Shoshone St. E., Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Red Cross sends Shoshone woman to Virgin Islands

TWIN FALLS — Would-be developers of a new retail car lot will tell city planning and zoning commissioners tonight how they plan to reduce the impact of the proposed development on adjacent residential areas.

The Planning and Zoning Commission meets at 7 p.m. tonight for public hearings in the City Council chambers at City Hall.

Gary Storer, president of Gary's Westland Motors, wants to build an 8,000-square-foot showroom, office and shop to sell automobiles, trailers and recreational vehicles on about 7.5 acres in the 2400 block of Addison Ave. E.

The planning and zoning staff has recommended that the commission approve the Storer's request for rezoning until he provides more detailed plans for landscaping, drainage, lot spacing, a bicycle and pedestrian corridor and buffer zones between the proposed business and nearby residents. Also tonight, the commission will:

- View a preliminary plan for the proposed Newport Subdivision on about 10 acres of vacant land across Caswell Avenue from Robert Stuart Junior High.

The 50-lot subdivision at the southeast corner of Caswell Avenue and Wendell Street would include apartments along Wendell Street and town houses in the eastern part of the property.

• Hear public comment on a request by Hristo Nedelcev to operate a painting and excavation business from his home at 260 Lake Blvd. S.

Nedelcev's business utilizes two large vehicles — a boom truck and a backhoe — which he wants to park at the back of his property.

SHOSHONE — Just a week ago, 66-year-old registered nurse Geraldine Curry was asked to go to the U.S. Virgin Islands and help those devastated by Hurricane Marilyn.

Less than 24 hours later, the American Red Cross volunteer left Twin Falls and eventually landed on St. Thomas, where residents had no electricity and two hours of water a day, her husband, Lawrence Curry of Shoshone, said Monday.

His wife has called a couple of times since she left Wednesday on the national disaster-relief mission; she should be on the islands about three weeks before she is relieved by another volunteer.

Geraldine Curry is the only American Red Cross volunteer in the Virgin Islands from the local Sawtooth Chapter, which includes Twin Falls, Lincoln, Gooding, Jerome and Blaine counties. Only one other Idahoan is volunteering there now.

And for national disasters such as Hurricane Marilyn — along with destruction right here in the Magic Valley — the chapter is looking for more volunteers with disaster-service training who can be called to help.

"We're seeking volunteers to come into the chapter and get training and be ready for the next one," said Michael Young, emergency services coordinator for the Red Cross' Sawtooth Chapter.

"We need to have more people in here in case an emergency happens," Young added.

Experts say devastation in the Virgin Islands, which more than 300 Red Cross volunteers are helping rebuild, is similar to that of Hurricane Hugo in 1989. Relief efforts for that hurricane cost the American Red Cross more than $68 million.

But Red Cross volunteers aren't only called on to help after hurricanes. Helping families after fires is a more common assignment locally, and Young said the Sawtooth Chapter has just six people trained for disaster service.

Lawrence Curry said his wife has volunteered with the Red Cross for about four years. The only other disaster-relief mission he recalls her going on was after an apartment-building fire in Twin Falls, he said.

2 Montanans mauled by grizzly bear in Alberta

LAKE LOUISE, Alberta (AP) — A female grizzly bear mauled four campers — two of them from Montana — as they slept in their tents near Lake Louise Monday.

Bob Haney, chief warden at Banff National Park in the Canadian Rockies, said the bear tore into three tents pitched on separate sites at a campground just outside the village of Lake Louise.

A bear cub reportedly also was at the site.

The names of the injured campers were withheld pending notification of their families. Haney said they included a German, an Australian and two women from Montana.

All three women were treated for cuts and bites, and one suffered a broken arm, Haney said.

Wyoming schools crack down on free-loading Idaho students

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Administrators don't know how many Idaho students have been attending schools in Wyoming's Teton County, but they know their free rides are over.

Jackson Hole school officials said they have started enforcing Wyoming law requiring that the district charge tuition to students attending from outside the county.

Parents will have to scramble to either meet residency requirements, come up with the $6,372 annual tuition or make plans to have their children schooled in overcrowded classes on the Idaho side of Teton Pass.

About 50 junior high and high school students from Alta, Wyo., pay tuition to attend the Teton School District in Driggs, Idaho. But that is easier to handle since Idaho charges between $3,500 and $3,700 per student.

The Jackson Hole school district's business manager, Sharon Parrot, said letters have been mailed out telling parents that proof of residency would be required.

Parrot said nearly a dozen high school students could be affected.

"People who are very honest have paid tuition," she said.

Others, however, appear to have been deliberately dishonest by giving Jackson addresses, even though they live in Idaho.

"We're needing to do some further investigation," Parrot said.

Jackson Hole Middle School Principal Pam Shea said she knew of two students who have Idaho addresses and have attended middle school classes for free.

"These are cases of inconsistency and the board wants us to clean it up," she said.

Kendzovsky Campus Principal Gary Elliott said he knew of one student but guessed the number may be about 10 at his schools.

"We're aware of some people who drop their kids off in the morning in cars with Idaho plates and the addresses on the emergency cards that we require are a little suspect," he said. "But I'm not trying to make this any kind of a hunt here. This is really not the kids' fault, I've got kids who are like pawns in this thing."

Carol O'Meara of Driggs said she was surprised to learn last week that she was the only Idaho parent who had been paying the tuition.

"She's a supreme citizen. It's just not fair that she was alone in this," said district school board member Marshall Gengery. "In my opinion, we have no authorization to give someone a free education. We have to live up to the state statutes."

O'Meara, meanwhile, said the best plan would be for voters in the neighboring Idaho school district to approve expansion of school buildings.

"Every time the bond comes up, I go and vote for it," said O'Meara, a registered nurse at the Jackson hospital.

"There are so few opportunities in the high school over here."

Craig mining bill draws veto threat

BOISE (AP) — A proposal to end a moratorium on the transfer of federal land to mining companies has angered Idaho environmentalists and drawn a veto threat from the Clinton administration.

"It means we're going to continue to give away our lands at rock-bottom prices," said Lynn Stone of the Boulder-White Clouds Council, a Ketchum-based environmental group.

But supporters of the legislation say it would help Idaho's economy. Vice President Al Gore on Friday said that President Clinton would veto an Interior Department spending bill because it includes many measures destructive of the environment.

The bill, which cleared a House-Senate conference committee this week but still needs approval by the full Congress, incorporates measures by Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, that would lift a moratorium on "mining patents." Craig's measures establish royalties for minerals mined from federal land and

'Neither side is going to like all the elements in these provisions, but that doesn't lessen the need for balanced reform.'

— Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho

require companies to pay more for the land.

Mining patents, established by an 1872 law and unchanged since then, give mining companies title to their claims on federal land and exempts the mines from many federal environmental laws. The existing law transfers the land for $2.50 or $5 an acre.

Craig's legislation would clear the way for companies to move forward on 47 mining patents in Idaho that were put on hold by the moratorium. The moratorium was part of an unsuccessful effort by the last Congress to reform mining law. The Idaho patents include 28,000 acres in national forests and Bureau of Land Management holdings.

Craig's office said lifting the moratorium is part of an important reform package.

"Neither side is going to like all the elements in these provisions, but that doesn't lessen the need for balanced reform," the senator said.

Jack Lyman of the Idaho Mining Association certainly doesn't sound upset. He said lifting the moratorium would help the state.

"We will have responsible mining that will protect our environment while contributing to our economy," he said.

Bryce Canyon reopens 8 miles of rim road

BRUCE CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Utah (AP) — After two years of reconstruction, an eight-mile stretch of the scenic rim road through Bryce Canyon National Park has reopened.

Visitors can now drive a safer road and see more apt to find parking spaces at the five viewpoints at the south end, said Bryce Superintendent Fred Eagergren. The road was reopened Friday.

Sheree Garrett, the park's fee-collecting supervisor, said many visitors have felt shortchanged during construction.

"Some people have wanted their money back," Garrett said. "If only those people would come back and see what we've done, they'd understand why we had to close the road."

The $8 million project involved the widening of the road to two 11-foot lanes, each with a 2-foot shoulder. The road was realigned in some areas for safety reasons.

Crews enlarged and improved parking areas and viewing platforms at Natural Bridge, Agua Canyon, Ponderosa Canyon, Yovimpa Point and Rainbow Point to accommodate buses and recreational vehicles, which have accounted for the bulk of the increase in visitors.

Idaho Technical College director will be leaving

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Eastern Idaho Technical College is losing its director.

Grace Guemple has accepted a position at a community college in Minnesota.

During her five-year tenure, Guemple has helped expansion of the Idaho Falls school by establishing a foundation to support the school, lining up funding for new classrooms and overseeing development of a distance learning center.

The state Division of Vocational Education has started a search for a new director.

In the meantime, assistant director Bill Robertson has been appointed interim director.

Albion questions sewage plan Minidoka grange hall may become a halfway house

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News Writer

BURLEY — Residents and government officials in Albion question the safety of plans to dump septic-tank sewage on ground a few miles southeast of Albion.

But South Central District Health Department specialists say they aren't worried about sewage runoff into nearby Summit Creek.

Although the creek eventually turns into Marsh Creek and runs through Albion, officials told citizens at a hearing Monday that the proposed dump site is one of the best in the Magic Valley.

Alternatives for dumping septic tank waste are being sought in Minidoka and Cassia counties. The only place left to dump is at the regional landfill, and that costs at least twice as much as any past means of disposal.

All other landfills in both counties have closed since the regional landfill opened 12 miles west of Burley in early 1994. City sewage-treatment plants won't take the waste, because the plants can't handle high volumes of highly concentrated septic waste.

Some officials suspect that illegal dumping is occurring along road-sides or on private property.

While things in Cassia County remain unresolved, Minidoka County commissioners agreed Monday to a 12-acre dump site northwest of Rupert, near an old landfill. Three Rupert septic tank pumpers — Deno's Septic Tank Cleaning, Valdez Levi Septic Tank Cleaning and Dockstader Excavation & Pumping — will be given four acres each for dumping waste.

The sewage will be dished into the ground, and native grasses will be planted to soak up potentially toxic nitrogen levels in the soil.

Minidoka County Commissioner John Remsburg said the commission approved the dump site, because the area needs a place to dispose of septic tank waste at an affordable price.

"If we don't provide a place for it to go at a reasonable cost, it's going to go places where it's not desirable," Remsburg said.

Robert Deno, owner of Deno's Septic Tank Cleaning, said he must pay the county only $10 to dump a load at the approved site, and that his company will disc the sewage into the ground. It will be cheaper than paying at least $40 to dump a load at the county landfill, he said.

One of Deno's customers, Cassia County Assessor Martell Holland, had to pay a $208 bill last week to dump two full loads at the regional landfill, Deno said.

Holland said he thinks a more affordable alternative than dumping at the regional landfill needs to be found. But he sympathized with Albion residents for not wanting it near their community.

The county received a petition, signed by an estimated 100 people, asking commissioners to reject the site.

Woody Anderson, owner of Pomerelle Ski Area, submitted a letter of support for the dump site.

The site, located next to an old landfill, would cater to Pomerelle residents of the Albion Valley, the City of Rocks and the U.S. Forest Service through Deno's Septic Tank Cleaning, according to rancher Bennie Smyer. Smyer owns the dump site property and said he wants to generate some income off of the land since the landfill there has closed.

Other septic tank pumpers may have the option to dump there if the site can handle it, Smyer said.

State Sen. Jim Kempton, R-Albion, Albion Mayor Don Danner and Albion Water Master Don Gunderson all voiced strong concern about the area's water supply.

Former Cassia County Commissioner Norman Dayley wrote a letter urging commissioners to reject the dump site.

Two health district officials — Environmental Health Specialist Scott Arnell and Solid Waste Coordinator Gary McOmber — said the site meets all requirements.

The site is at least 400 feet from Summit Creek, McOmber said. Building dikes around the site would prevent any run-off into the creek, he said.

The biggest question is whether Smyer can get water to irrigate a crop at the site, McOmber said. A crop must be grown in order to soak up added nitrogen in the soil, he said.

Smyer says he can get water to the site.

Commissioners say they will visit the site and make a decision on Oct. 10. They also may ask for additional information about protecting the area's water quality.

RUPERT — Minidoka County commissioners are kicking around the idea of establishing a halfway house for troubled youth.

"This would be a place where you could start rebuilding your life," said Clayne Zollinger, assistant county prosecutor, at a commissioners' meeting Monday.

The idea, which is far from being a "go," would aim at helping juveniles who have been released from state custody and are considered ready to re-enter society.

It would give them an alternative to returning to the living conditions they were in before they got into trouble.

"I think it's a good idea, because we see so many of these kids that go back home and they're right back where they were before," Zollinger said.

If a halfway house were established, it might be located in the old Emerson Grange Hall, outside Burley, which the grange gave to the county a few months ago, Commissioner John Remsburg said.

Rensburg said the halfway house could be part of the new Mini-Cassia juvenile justice system.

'I think it's a good idea because we see so many of these kids that go back home and they're right back where they were before.'

— Clayne Zollinger, assistant prosecutor for Minidoka County tem, which will begin operating next week. The state Legislature has directed counties to take over control of juvenile detention from the state Department of Health and Welfare as of Oct. 1.

"There's a lot of ironing out to be done in this next legislative session. I wouldn't do anything until then," Zollinger said.

In other business:

• Paul Aston, a county building official, said office remodeling will be finished early next week for the Mini-Cassia juvenile justice system. The offices are in the upstairs portion of the Minidoka County Courthouse.

• Commissioners discussed refinancing their outstanding bonds that were issued to pay for the Mini-Cassia jail.

Refinancing at today's lower interest rates "will save us hopefully about $90,000 over the course of the bond payment," Rensburg said. Commissioners may sign an agreement with West One Bank next week.

• Commissioners approved an agreement to allow commercial collectors of residential septic waste to dump it into drying beds at the old Minidoka County landfill.

Hailey Council bans snowmobiles at night

HAILEY — Residents may sleep better this winter; the City Council voted Monday night to approve a new ordinance prohibiting the operation of a snowmobile between the hours of 10 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Snowmobiles may drive on the public streets, but not alleys, and only for access to and from a snowmobile recreation. The vehicles are prohibited from many residential areas, Main Street, and most of Highway 75, as well as the bike path, which is to be used for cross-country skiing in winter.

The ordinance makes helmets, mufflers, registration, and drivers' licenses mandatory. The council made it illegal to drive a snowmobile under the influence of drugs or alcohol or more than 15 mph. The "in-lieu" parking fees for businesses were recalculated to $7,787.50 per space.

Agreement may keep utility rates stable

BOISE — Under terms of a proposed agreement filed with the Public Utilities Commission, Idaho Power Co.'s general rates could remain stable through 2000.

The commission plans an Oct. 10 hearing on the proposal, filed Monday. If approved, the utility could accelerate its use of accumulated investment tax credits which have been deferred.

Idaho Power said if the five-year agreement is approved, it will not seek a general rate increase. That moratorium will allow rate adjustments for surcharges or "costs associated with catastrophic events outside the company's control."

As part of the agreement, Idaho Power agreed that as a result of corporate reorganization, it will not allow its quality of service to diminish.

Closing the first cell and opening a second will cost the county $1.2 to 1.4 million, he said.

But the alliance with Schultz's team will put that expense further in the future by utilizing the latest technology in landfill management, Maughan said.

"It just makes real good sense to make use of that knowledge if it's available," he said.

Blame

Some of the departed jail employees were cashed out for as little as $800, in addition to their wages during their final pay period, Jax said. But when Morgado quit, it took an additional — and unbudgeted — $6,300 to cash him out, Jax said.

The 1994-95 budget was an extremely tight one that didn't have much cushion for unexpected payments over and above base salaries, the sheriff said. Part of the reason the budget was so tight was due to a jump in the base monthly salary for jailers, he said.

In the 1993-94 budget year, the base rate for jailers with more than four months on the job was $1,100 per month, but the figure rose to $1,325 in the 1994-95 budget year, Jax said.

The sheriff said it appears the 1994-95 budget was calculated using the old salary figures.

MAMMOGRAM SCREENING CAN BE A LIFESAVER

Regular breast self-examination is smart. Delaying a mammogram until you feel something suspicious is not. That's why Cassia Regional Medical Center, in recognition of National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, is reducing the cost of a mammogram so you can increase your chances of early detection. Statistics show that when detected early, breast cancer is about 95% curable.

Cassia Regional Medical Center Imaging Services is accredited by the American College of Radiology, FDA Certified and offers mammographers that are advanced level certified technologists.

Don't look a gift horse in the mouth

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are having a disagreement about whether or not we should continue to send birthday gifts to our nephew. He is 8 years old, and we have been sending him gifts since his birth, but we have never received an acknowledgment for any of them.

My husband recently informed me that if we don't receive an acknowledgment this year, it will be the last birthday gift we send him.

I think it's unfair to punish the child for something his parents failed to teach him. My husband, on the other hand, feels that if we don't send the boy a gift, he will ask his parents why we didn't send one, and they will then figure it out. We have agreed to abide by our advice.

NOT TO BESTOW OR NOT TO BESTOW

DEAR BESTOW: I agree with you. It's unfair to punish an 8-year-old child for something his parents failed to teach him as a common courtesy.

It's far better to tell his parents that they should teach their son that every gift deserves a prompt "thank you" from the child - even if it is printed in a child's scribble.

DEAR ABBY: I am a loyal reader of your column, and thought you might enjoy this clipping I copied from the one taped to my mother's refrigerator. It has been there forever, and I don't know where it came from (a magazine, I think).

Although I hate to admit it, it sounds just like my sister and me when we were in our obnoxious teens. Now that we're 24 and 21, I see where our parents were coming from when they grounded us for weeks at a time!

Hope you think it's worth sharing with your readers.

AMY JOHNSON, PHOENIX
DEAR AMY: I'm sure many readers will identify with it. Read on:

MY MOST UNFAVORABLE LINES

FROM MY KIDS

"Not now, I'll do it later."

"How come I always have to do everything?"

"You just don't understand!"

"You don't trust me!"

"Well, Dad said I could."

"I DID turn the volume down."

"Everybody is doing it."

"I DID clean it."

"But, MOM..."

"I call this 'smartmouth.' My husband calls it 'communication.' What do you call it?"

SOMEbody's MOM

Amy, I call it typical talk from a typical teenager.

My problem is that Roy wants me to plan our wedding. It will be the second for both of us; we are both divorced. We both have grown children from our previous marriages.

My problem is that Roy wants me to wear a white wedding gown, and I say that since I'm not a virgin I will look ridiculous. Am I wrong, Abby? Roy has agreed to abide by what you say.

Please don't use my initials as the name of my town because the population is less than 10,000, and you know how people in small towns talk.

BRIDE-TO-BE

DEAR BRIDE: The second-time bride usually forgoes wearing all white. You could wear a long or short dress in a very pale color - off-white or white with color in the trim or your accessories. An afternoon dress, long or short, or a traveling suit is also appropriate.

HOW CAN YOU TELL IF YOUR TEEN NEEDS HELP?

Sometimes it is hard for parents to tell if their teenager's behavior is part of a normal phase of development or warning signs of emotional or psychological problems, or involvement with alcohol or drugs.

The following are some of the common signs an adolescent is having difficulty:

- Sudden drop in school grades
- Loss of interest in normal activities
- Truancy/Absenteeism
- Changes in eating and sleeping habits
- Dropping favorite school activity
- Becoming withdrawn/non-communicative
- Marked personality changes
- Talk of death/suicide
- Any outbursts
- Difficulty in concentrating
- Crying spells
- Disciplinary problems
- Memory problems
- Change of friends
- Trends toward left-handedness
- Giving away possessions

If you have noticed some of these signs in one of your teens or are concerned about other behaviors, you will be able to have your teen evaluated by a mental health professional. Assessments are provided immediately to respond to emergencies. Appointments can be scheduled for each teen through Canyon View Hospital and Counseling Centers.

Appointments for a free, confidential assessment will be available at any of these locations:

Waco home to Dr. Pepper

So many gunfighters shot up the streets of Waco, Texas, in the 1880s that locals called the place "Six-Shooter Junction." That explains, only in part, why the soft drink Dr. Pepper - concocted there in 1886 - advertised: "Good Marksmanship Wins Battles... Dope Drinkers cannot Shoot... Drink Dr. Pepper."

In any given geographical region, the birth rate dips exactly nine months after a severe heat wave. So recent computer runs indicate:

Client writes: "Kentucky is heaven. The best grass for horses. The best limestone for whiskey. Sheer heaven!"

Popeye the Sailor was in the Coast Guard.

A couple three million years ago, dragon flies grew as big as gulls, or almost. The air was 35 percent oxygen. Now it's 21 percent. Try your hand at writing science fiction. A mysterious explosion releases vast amounts of oxygen into the atmosphere. And every living thing starts to get bigger. Already been too? Suppose so.

Market ends mostly lower

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks closed mixed Monday as profit-taking in technology issues dragged the broad market lower while spurring blue chips.

Uncertainty about interest rates on the eve of a Federal Reserve policy meeting struck a somber note on Wall Street even though the investment community has virtually ruled out chances of lower rates in the immediate future.

Trading on Wall Street fell during the observance of the Jewish New Year. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange amounted to 273.11 million shares as of 4 p.m. Eastern time, down from 370.79 million Friday.

Blue chips managed to finish positively after the Dow Jones industrial average bounced back about a 20-point decline. It rose 5.78 to 4,769.93.

But losers beat gainers by about 13 to 9 on the Big Board and most measures of market activity made minor moves. The NYSE composite index slipped 0.12 to 311.76 and Standard & Poor's 500 edged up 0.08 to 581.81. The American Stock Exchange market value index skidded 3.52 to 544.38.

Heavy selling in technology stocks hurt the Nasdaq Stock Market, which lists numerous computer and related issues. Worries about the profitability of certain bellwether companies bedeviled the technology sector. The Nasdaq composite index lost 7.24 to 1,046.15.

Market analysts said the urge to sell tech stocks and collect profits amassed during a stunning rise in the sector this year probably has yet to be satisfied.

Losers among the technology stocks included several high-profile computer chip makers. Micron Technology was the Big Board's volume leader, slumping 3K to 82.

Overseas action offered little to inspire U.S. investors. In Tokyo, the 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average fell 147.50 points, or 0.83 percent, closing at 17,566.43 points.

Low interest rates boost used-home sales

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Low mortgage rates drew more buyers to the market in August, boosting sales of previously owned homes to a 15-month high.

David Lereah, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association, noted rates are dropping again and leading to further shrinkage in housing inventories.

President Edmund G. Woods Jr. of the National Association of Realtors agreed.

"Buyers have taken advantage of the low mortgage rates and will continue to do so through the end of the year as they feel confident that the economy is in recovery, helping the housing market — especially resales — strengthen," he said.

The real-estate group reported Monday that sales of previously owned single-family homes totaled 4.11 million at a seasonally adjusted annual rate in August, highest since a similar rate in May 1994.

August sales were 3 percent above July's 3.99 million rate and 5.1 percent higher than the 3.91 million pace a year ago. Every region contributed to the increase.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. has reported that fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages averaged 7.85 percent in August, up from 7.61 percent in July but well below the 9.15 percent in January.

They had fallen back to 7.57 percent last week, representing a considerable savings since the year began.

The monthly payment on a $100,000 mortgage with a 7.5 percent interest rate is $699, while the payment on the same loan with a 9 percent rate is $805 — a difference of $106.

The mortgage rate stimulus to sales has shrunk the monthly supply of existing homes on the market to 5.1 months in August, down from 6.7 months in April, according to the real-estate survey.

The government reported earlier that the supply of new homes had fallen to a six-month supply in July, down from 7.2 months in February. It reports August sales on Friday.

Housing starts totaled 1.398 million at seasonally adjusted annual rate in August, the highest level so far this year.

But offsetting some of the savings from lower mortgage rates was the national median price of a used home.

It was $117,600, up 4.1 percent from $113,000 a year earlier. The median is the midpoint, meaning half the homes cost more and half cost less.

Regionally, the Midwest registered the biggest sales advance, up 3.9 percent from July to a 1.06 million annual rate. The median price there was $97,600, compared with $89,700 in August 1994.

Sales in the West rose 3.4 percent to a 900,000 rate.

The median price was $151,700, up from $149,100 a year earlier.

Sales also rose 3.4 percent in the Northeast, to a 600,000 rate. The median price was $142,300, down from $145,000 in August 1994.

In the South, sales advanced 1.3 percent to a 1.54 million rate. The median price was $102,900, compared with $98,100 a year earlier.
